MULHALL PROBE IS PUT OFF

WASHINGTON, July 1.—An indefinite postponement of the investigation of Colonel Martin M. Mulhall's charges against members of Congress was decided upon by the Overman Lobby Investigating Committee today.

"New fields of investigation have opened up so rapidly," said Chairman Overman, "that we feel that some system of inquiry should be inaugurated. We have, therefore, decided to postpone an investigation of the Mulhall charges until we have disposed of the examination of Paul Cravath, Lewis Cass Ledyard and David Lamar, and until we have cleaned up the sugar lobby and the wool lobby investigation. I cannot tell when we will be able to hear Colonel Mulhall."

Senator Overman said there is no disposition on the part of his committee to evade an exhumation which might involve the reputation of Congressmen. He stated that a large number of subpoenas have been issued and the committee expects these men to hold themselves subject to the call of the committee.

John Kirby, former president of the National Association of Manufacturers, and David M. Parry of Indianapolis, a former member of the association, answered the subpoenas issued for them from San Francisco today. They pleaded with Overman to let them continue a proposed trip to Europe, stating that to call off their arrangements now would mean a personal loss of $5,000.

Senator Overman ordered the men to Washington at [illegible]

SUICIDE OF FORTY WOMEN

MEXICO CITY, July 1.—Forty women residents, most of them of the better class, have committed suicide in the city of Durango since its occupation last week by the rebels after a long siege, according to a private letter received here from that city today.

The women, it says, became desperate as the result of their treatment by the victorious rebels.

Consular advices say that the rebels who entered Durango conducted themselves like bandits, burning a large part of the business section of the city after looting it, and joining in the wildest excesses. The report says that foreign flags were not respected.

A few American citizens were wounded during the fighting and one Englishman was killed, according to these reports. The Mexican Government is preparing a column of troops to march to the relief of the city, but many days must pass before its arrival there.

Dreadful details of the two weeks' fighting between General Obregon's Mexican rebels and General Ojeda's federal forces around Guaymas during which 2,500 federals were killed, wounded or taken prisoners were received today. On June 25 the remnant of the federal army straggled into Guaymas.

The men were frantic from suffering and many were in the delirium of fever.

The retreat of the Federals continued all the horrors of war. Harassed constantly by the rebels, the retreat became a rout. The government troops threw away their arms and many became insane from fever and thirst. They abandoned their clothing [illegible]

17,543 Increase in Year's Immigrants

Bureau Submits Report for Boston for Twelve Months.

The fiscal year, ending yesterday, of the Immigration Bureau in the Port of Boston, shows with the exception of 1907 and 1906 the largest immigration in this port. 66,836 aliens having come to this port and paid a head tax as against 49,293 last year.

Those figures do not include the non-immigrant aliens. The ports of Portland and Providence, which come under the jurisdiction of the Port of Boston, also show large gains. Portland had 26,422 against 14,419 last year, while Providence had 12,210 against 5,939 the year previous. New Bedford showed a loss, having 1,117 against 1,405 last year.

With one exception, the month of June was the largest in history, 9,798 aliens having paid the head tax. The Italian-American line in the months of May and June brought 2,238 on two ships.

Bolster Unable to Serve on Board

Chief Justice Bolster of the Municipal Court has declined to serve as chairman of the Commission to Investigate Drunkenness, which was created by the last Legislature. He was recently named for the position by Governor Foss. Justice Bolster in his letter of declination states that the changes in the procedure in police trials brought about the legislation of a year ago have made such demands upon his time that he cannot take up additional work at this time.

A. W. Shepard Wed to Boston Girl

Former Aldermen Amos W. Shepard of Somerville surprised his friends this afternoon by his marriage to Miss Jessie P. Wilson of No. 230 Newbury street, Boston. The couple were married by the Rev. Harley D. Maxwell, pastor of the First Universalist Church, at his home in Grand View avenue. The attendants were James W. Williamson and Miss Grace T. Hazeltine.

HOTTEST DAY OF THE YEAR

HEAT PROSTRATIONS.

MISS ANNIE FITZGIBBONS, forty-two, of No. 223 Harrison avenue, overcome in front of No. 62 Harvard stret. City Hospital.

MISS MARY CURLEY, nineteen, of No. 22 O street, South Boston, overcome in front of No. 741 East Sixth street. Carney Hospital.

At 2 o'clock the official mercury registered 95, making this the hottest day of the year in Boston.

Though Boston temperature approached the 95-mark by mid-afternoon, cool relief was scheduled for this evening, with probable showers.

Tomorrow is also scheduled to be cooler.

The Hub was the hottest place on the United States weather map at 10 a. m., when its temperature was 86. At that time it was only 46 degrees at Durango, Cal., while it was raining at Eastport, Me. This information failed to cheer up and down Washington street.

Boston is now getting what the West has been experiencing for six days. Chicago dispatches say that a cool north wind and showers have brought relief. The thermometer dropped twenty degrees in a few hours and the return to a seasonable temperature was welcomed by Chicago's citizens, who have sweltered in the hottest heat spell ever recorded in the city's history for June. Revised records of the death toll of the intense heat of yesterday brought the total to fifty.

At least 104 persons died yesterday as a result of the hot wave in the Central West.

ARTIST CALIGA SUES HIS WIFE

Isaac Henry Caliga, the Boston and Salem artist, filed a suit for divorce at Salem today against Phoebe Woodman Caliga of Oak Knoll, Danvers, whom he charges with desertion.

News of this broken romance of art and society will interest prominent families of the North Shore and Essex county, as well as artistic circles in Boston.

Mr. Caliga has a studio on St. Botolph street, Boston, but lives in Salem. He is fifty-six years old and was born in Indiana.

He married Phoebe J. Woodman at Oak Knoll, Danvers, in 1893. Two children were born to them.

Mr. Caliga declares, in his libel, that his wife deserted him in March, 1910, and has been away ever since.

Patrons of art are familiar with Mr. Caliga's name. He holds a medal from a Munich Exposition, painted several portraits in the Massachusetts State House and has had pictures in various exhibitions in Boston and [illegible].

"FIND GUILTY IN RIVER TRAGEDY," ALDERMAN URGES

LAWRENCE, July 1.—As though in answer to Medical Examiner Dow's charge earlier in the day that city officials were responsible for the drowning of eleven boys through the breaking of a bathhouse gangway yesterday, Alderman Paul Hanna-

WOULD PUT NEW MARK ON MASSACRE SITE.

Some appropriate plan for marking the site of the Boston massacre on State street is desired by the public works department. The spot will be painted for July 4 so that all who visit the Old State House and the vicinity on Independence Day will recognize it at once. At the present time the spot is marked by a circular pavement distinct from the regular paving, but it is hardly noticeable.

FIGHT GARAGE LICENSE AT HEARING.

Commonwealth avenue residents turned out to protest today when the street commissioners gave a hearing on the question of granting a garage license for the storage of gasoline to Dr. E. T. Easton in the rear of his residence, 209 Newbury street.

CRIMINAL NEGLECT OF THE CITY OFFICIALS COST ELEVEN LIVES, SAYS DOW

"Conditions revealed by the investigation show that city officials of Lawrence, through their neglect, are responsible for the accident. Warrants for manslaughter may be asked for against some of the city officials today."—Medical Examiner George W. Dow of Lawrence.

MAY ASK WARRANTS FOR LAWRENCE OFFICIALS HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR TRAGEDY

gan, at a meeting of the City Council at ten o'clock, called for a sweeping investigation, "No matter who is hit."

COUNCIL TO PAY FOR VICTIMS' FUNERALS.

Alderman Hannagan declared:

"Let's investigate this, no matter who is hit. Somebody in official place is responsible for the disaster. Let us find out who it is. Let us go the limit."

A sub-committee was appointed to probe the case. It consists of Mayor Scanlon, Director of Public Safety Lynch and Alderman Hannagan.

The sub-committee left for the scene of the accident.

The Council also voted $1,000 to defray the funeral expenses for each of the eleven boy-victims.

City Responsible, Says Father.

Among those present in the Council Chamber was Alfred Gaudette of Fitchburg, father of ten-year-old Romaldo Gaudette, one of the victims. After the session Mr. Gaudette said passionately:

"The City of Lawrence, through its officials, is responsible for the death of my boy and of the other boys."

Alderman Alfred J. Bradbury, who has charge of all public buildings, hastened to excuse himself from blame in Gaudette. Alderman Bradbury's men of the public buildings department built the bathhouse gangway whose collapse caused the drownings, doing the work under supervision of John O. Battersilli, superintendent of public property. Alderman Bradbury said to Gaudette:

"I am grief-stricken over this. No one in all Lawrence regrets what happened yesterday more than I do. I thought this walk was properly and safely constructed. I do not feel that I am to blame."

Puts It Up to Battersilli.

Earlier in the day Bradbury put the responsibility up to Battersilli, who refuses to talk, pending the official investigations.

While the City Council was beginning its inquiry Medical Examiner Dow was filing his report and an inquest was being planned by Judge Mahoney of Lawrence District Court.

Mr. Dow made no attempt to fix responsibility in his report, beyond concluding it thus:

"The deaths were caused by drowning and primarily to the cave-in of the passageway."

Dr. Dow puts it up to the court to place the blame and Judge J. J. Mahoney will hold the inquest as quickly as possible in order that the responsibility for the multiple tragedy may be fastened.

The Medical Examiner said, before filing his report:

"Conditions from the investigation already made disclose the fact that city officials of Lawrence, through their neglect, are responsible for the accident. Warrants charging certain officials with manslaughter may be asked for in court today."

Alderman Bradbury today put the responsibility up to Battersilli, saying:

I put the construction of this passageway up to Battersilli when it was built. He was a competent man and I believed him capable of doing it. But I see now that there was something wrong somewhere.

Though Medical Examiner Dow, as a personal interview with an AMERICAN reporter today, declared that city officials were responsible for the disaster he confined his formal report to the court to a statement of the drowning itself. His report was as follows:

Medical Examiner's Report.

Lawrence, July 1.

I report that on Monday, June 30, eleven boys, whose ages ran from fifteen to eight years, were drowned in the Merrimac River at a point on the north bank 500 yards west of the Essex Company's dam.

At this point the city of Lawrence maintains bathing houses during the Summer season. June 30 was the date formally set for the opening of these bathing houses. The bathing houses are anchored about fifty feet from the shore and a passageway extends from the bank to the houses.

A large number of boys were on this passageway, awaiting the opening of the Eastern bathhouse at 2 o'clock, when it was generally understood some fifty boys into the river. Of these, eleven were drowned.

Dr. Dow included the names and ages of the eleven boys, as already printed, then concluded his report thus:

The deaths were caused by drowning and primarily by the cave-in of the passageway.

To Press Inquest.

After receiving this report Judge Mahoney said:

"I shall call an inquest early on this case."

The inquest is expected to take place this week, even though the holiday makes the week a short one.

The statement of Dr. Dow to the AMERICAN, charging neglect by city officials, is right in line with public sentiment all over the city. There is an insistent demand for an investigation that will find the responsible person or persons and inflict punishment as well.

Many looked for manslaughter warrants to be asked in court.

The preliminary police examination of the scene of the drowning showed that the gangway was built of cheap materials, in a flimsy manner, and that the woodwork was rotten. Rusty nails were used to bind the boards and timbers.

Eleven bodies have been recovered from the river bed. This is believed to have been the total number of boys drowned, as the police received no further reports of children missing from their homes over night. The divers resumed their work at the bottom of the river today, however, and they will continue until it is absolutely certain the bodies of all the drowned have been recovered.

Under the new form of city government which went into effect in Lawrence a year ago giving each of the Aldermen or Commissioners a special department to look after, Alderman Bradbury was given charge of all public buildings. This included bathhouses as well as the other municipal structures.

When he took office this year he discharged James Flanagan as Inspector of Buildings. Flanagan was a capable carpenter and performed his duties thoroughly. In his place Alderman Bradbury appointed Battersilli, who also succeeded to the title of Superintendent of Public Property, and is in command to the Alderman himself.

Never Inspected.

It was his duty to look after and inspect all public buildings, stagings, gangplanks, etc. The gangplank leading to the boat house was built under the Bradbury-Battersilli regime and, it is charged, by unskilled labor. The materials used in its construction were faulty, and it is said neither Bradbury nor Battersilli ever inspected the gang plank after it was completed.

Battersilli is a cabinet-maker by trade, but for the last twenty years has held down political jobs in the city of Lawrence through his influence with the Republican machine.

PHELAN AFTER 'HIGHER UPS' IN STAMFORD CASE

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., July 1.—Coroner Phelan today made clear his position in conducting the investigation into the Stamford wreck fatalities. His statement was made when the investigation was resumed with Secretary Clark of the New Haven Railroad in attendance in response to request with books and papers.

"I do not purpose to allow the New Haven Railroad or anyone acting for it to tell how I shall conduct this investigation," said the coroner.

"I wish it to be understood that I have no desire to make more difficult of defence those indicted in the Westport case, or to embarrass anyone in this investigation who should not be held to a responsibility in part for the Stamford wreck, and its consequent toll.

"It should go without the saying, in view of recent events, that it appears like a waste of time, if the railroad is in any manner at fault, to fail to place responsibility upon the man or men who acted as its representatives in causing the disaster.

"It is sufficient to say the coroner has done his duty to the public when if after investigation he should conclude that the company was at fault to hold it responsible as a corporation without naming each of it or in it whose conduct shaped that responsibility. The corporation as such cannot be adequately dealt with if it should be at fault.

"It is because of this I desire to know definitely what man or men, be he or they in or out of the corporation, who by his or their acts, omissions or directions caused in whole or in part the accident at Stamford.

"I wish to know, therefore, the powers of the engineer with and the duties imposed upon each, that responsibility for fault, if any should be found, shall be properly placed, that blame be placed on those who should be blamed, and not imposed on those who are blameless.

I have a public duty to perform in ascertaining to the best of my ability in accordance with law, whether any or what man or men rightfully deserve public censure in the premises.

25,000 BULGARS SURRENDER TO GREEK TROOPS

ST. PETERSBURG, July 1.—The Balkan allies were "commanded" today by the great Powers of Europe to quit fighting and to agree at once upon terms of peace.

The Russian ambassadors in Belgrade, Athens and Sofia were imperatively instructed to enjoin the governments of the allies to keep peace and to send their premiers to this city without further delay to renew the covenant of the Balkan league.

After thirteen hours of continuous fighting the Bulgarian garrison of 25,000 men which had been stationed on the outskirts of Solonica, surrendered this afternoon.

A Greek gunboat bombarded the Bulgarian camp near Eleftern, putting the Bulgars to flight.

Official announcement was made at Belgrade late today, that fighting between Servians and Bulgarians had been stopped. Premier Pasitch announces he will go to St. Petersburg to meet the other representatives of the Balkan allies in an effort to restore peace.

Active mobilization of the entire Roumanian army began today. The government explained it as precautionary.

Fancy Spooning by Girls in Trousers!

Miss Wilmarth Says She Would Not Wear 'em for a Fortune.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Miss Charles V. Wilmarth, who has returned from Paris on the Minnetonka, believes it is impossible for a woman to make love in trousers.

"I wouldn't wear them for a fortune," she said, "unless they were knickerbockers and I wore a skirt as well. Just imagine a man spooning with a girl wearing trousers.

"Women look more attractive in skirts, whether the material is transparent or not. All women are in the same business—love and matrimony—and they stick to skirts just as long as men wear trousers.

American Day at Revere Beach

Revere was packed from one end of the beach to the other this afternoon with over 100,000 AMERICAN readers, their friends and sweethearts and children, all enjoying the beach and its amusements as guests of the AMERICAN. All and the free coupons which were given away with last Sunday's AMERICAN, giving free admission to twelve big shows of the beach. The Bay State Street Railway Company and the Narrow Gauge put on every available extra car, as is done on Sunday or a holiday, but still the crowd came.

Crowds of people walked over from Chelsea, Everett and East Boston, unable to crowd into the cars. Everybody was good-natured. The proprietors of the amusement places who had co-operated with the AMERICAN in making today AMERICAN Day at Revere handled the great crowd splendidly, and AMERICAN Day was voted the biggest day Revere Beach has seen in many years.

The Sunday AMERICAN containing the free coupons was sold out early last Sunday and thousands more could have been sold if they could have been printed. The great crowd at Revere Beach this afternoon proved one great fact of which the AMERICAN is proud:

Everybody reads the AMERICAN.

"L" in Conference with Employes

Whether or not arbitration will be resorted to by the Boston Elevated Company and the Boston Street Carmen's Union to adjust the demands for an increased wage and better working conditions may be decided at a joint conference of representatives of the company and the union at the office of L. Richards in the Minot building today.

Several months ago the employes demanded a new schedule. Since then numerous conferences have been held. It has been impossible to date to come to any agreement, the company maintaining that it could not afford to accede to the men's demands and the men refusing to accept the terms offered by the company.

Mrs. Lufkin was in the attic cleaning various articles with gasoline when the liquid ignited and the entire attic took fire. The intense heat overpowered her. She was dragged down a pair of stairs to safety by her daughter.

The fire loss was $4,200.

Decision on Mellen Roads Next Week

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the New Haven Railroad case may be made public the first of next week. The case, which was heard by Commissioner Prouty, involves not only the reasonableness of rates on the New Haven and its allied lines in New England, but also the advisability of the service that the road furnishes to shippers and the question of alleged monopoly by the New Haven.

450 KISSES IN FINAL SERVICE OF SUN WORSHIP

Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish kissed each of his seventy-five followers three times. Each of the seventy-five kissed Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, and with this impressive ceremony the great conference of Mazdaznans in their Lowell Temple came to an end at 3 a. m. today.

Thus the conference with 450 kisses—Hanish kissing his followers a total of 225 kisses and they kissing him back a total of 225 kisses, or a total of 450 kisses which Hanish gave or got.

Before that there had been such doings about the Temple that suffering neighbors telephoned the police. The police could only say, "We can't interfere as long as they don't break the laws."

The final meeting of the Mazdaznans was the most important of all. It began with a two and a half hour spiritual exercise. Hanish spoke for an hour and a half on the "Unity of Sacrifice." "One who loves the religion must give up something—money—jewels—land—property—perhaps his children." That was the theme of his discourse. He sat upon a raised dais as he talked. He wore a red silk robe, and the listeners likewise wore robes. The walls of the Temple were blue, adorned with Hindu mottoes.

Pause for Breathing Exercises.

Hanish interrupted himself now and then to allow time for breathing exercises. These breathing exercises consist in repeating, in a single breath, a lengthy incantation to Mazda, head of the religion.

There was singing. One woman, attractive, brown-haired, mature, with a full soprano voice, sang, "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes," "Sing Me to Sleep" and "Under the Rose." The worshippers applauded rapturously.

At 11:30 the spiritual exercise ended—gave place to a more material diversion. Forming in line the seventy-five Mazdaznans marched out to the wide verandah that fringes the Hilton home—where the Temple has been built.

As they marched, they chanted—a chant of fifteen words, repeated again and again with monotonous cadences. They left the house along with lights, and lit up the rubbing room—Mrs. Hilton's apartment—where silken gowns hung on the walls.

Mrs. Hilton is high priestess. She and Hanish led the march to the banquet board. Here red lights were lit. Hanish took a chair with his back to a shrine, where a single red candle glowed, below a Roman candlestick with five branches. And the marchers each carried tiny lamps.

Banquet of Salads and Crackers.

Before they sat down, Hanish turned toward the shrine and chanted an invocation. Mrs. Hilton did the same. Then the banqueters chanted—waving their hands, as they did so, toward the shrine.

Then they sat down to eat. Here is the menu:

Tomato and lettuce salad.
Soda Crackers. Lemonade. Iced Tea. Cherries.

Before they began to eat, and while they ate, they talked—called greetings to Hanish, addressing him as "Master Dear," and "Blessed Master." High Priestess Hilton they called "Mother Marla." Her they worship for her beauty, and are accustomed to array her in elaborate garments, set her on a dais, and bow at her feet to adore her loveliness.

They ate two hours after those salads and crackers and cherries and sipped their ice tea and lemonade. And they chewed each would take bits for her bite at the same time—then each would chew and chew. Then they would each take another bite. And so on.

WIFE STANDS BY MAN HELD AS 'RICHESON'

SALISBURY, Md., July 1.—After a night's sound sleep, Harold Smith, general manager of the Home Gas Company, charged by the coroner's jury as an accessory "before and after" the fact in the death of Miss Florence Wainwright, the twenty-four-year-old cashier of the company, and who is out on $5,000 bail, arrived at his office this morning, smiling confidently and apparently not in the least worried over the outcome of his case.

Though Smith is confident that he will be proven innocent of the charges against him, the members of his family are prostrated over his arrest. His wife was at her home with their two children when she learned of Smith's arrest.

"My husband is innocent, I know. Oh, why is it an innocent person has been arrested?" she cried.

States Attorney Bell has not yet decided when he would ask for a special session of the court. He declared his intentions are to consult "higher" authority and to have the matter settled as soon as possible.

After Smith had conferred with his attorneys, Alonzo Miles and Alexander M. Jackson, the latter made the following statement:

"Our client will have a legal and vigorous defence. No evidence was produced at the inquisition that connected him with the charge. We are satisfied of his innocence."

Coleman and 100 Off to Sagamore

Noted Men to Take Part at Sociological Conference.

George W. Coleman and one hundred sociologist guests left the South station today on the 1 p. m. train for three days at Sagamore Beach, at the seventh annual Sociological conference.

The program this year contains such well-known names as those of George W. Perkins, Professor Edward A. Steiner, Arturo Giovannitti, Miner Shipman and others.

Professor Charles Zueblin will lead many of the discussions.

The relation between labor and capital and the distribution of wealth will be the chief theme.

The following names appear on the invited list:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Ely of New York, Hon. Frank Oliver Hall, New York; Mrs. Maud R. L. Sharpe, Rev. W. H. Spencer and his wife, Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer, Rev. and Mrs. Chas. Steizle of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sterling of Boston, Dr. and Mrs. Lane Lobunie, Mrs. Mary Keany O'Sullivan and Mr. and Mrs. Van Der Pyle of Haverhill.

May Open United Shoe Case at Once

It is probable hearings will start this week, possibly tomorrow, before Charles K. Darling, clerk of the United States District Court, sitting as special examiner, on the government's allegations in its suit against the United Shoe Machinery Company, relating to patents. The government is allowed until August 12 to present its case. From that date until September 27 the defendants will be heard.

New Low Record for Seat on Exchange

NEW YORK, July 1.—A Stock Exchange seat was sold last week for $40,000, a new low record price in the present movement. Previous to this a seat was sold for $42,000. Two other seats were sold during the Spring for as low as $41,000. The seat sold last week was that of William Robinson and the purchaser was Orme Wilson, Jr.

LADY SACKVILLE, who was bequeathed $5,000,000 by Sir John Murray Scott, whose family is contesting his will in the English courts.

LONDON, July 1.—Sir Samuel Evans' session of the Probate Court resembled a Summer gathering of fashion at Ranelagh today, so many titled and wealthy spectators jammed in to hear the testimony of Lady Sackville in defending the legacy of $5,000,000 left her by Sir John Murray Scott, Malcolm Scott, brother of the deceased, is contesting this legacy in behalf of the Scott family. The case for the contestants concluded today with the testimony of one witness and then Lord and Lady Sackville and their witnesses took the stand.

Lady Sackville made a general denial that she had exercised undue influence over Sir John. Sir Edward Carson summed up for the defence and declared that no evidence had been brought out to show the existence of a codicil annulling the bequest to Lady Sackville. He asked that the suit be dismissed, but Justice Evans refused to do this, deciding that it must go to the jury.

Smart London chatter is gaining new expressions from the trial. Rev. Edward Scott, brother of the deceased, testified that Lord and Lady Sackville were referred to as "Locusts."

This was taken as a stirring comparison to the devastating habits of that insect.

Had a "Nerve Storm."

Major Arbuthnot, formerly of the Scots Guards, described an attack Sir John Scott once had as "a regular nerve storm." Americans in the court recalled with a smile the Texas tribal origin of the similar phrase "brain storm."

Lady Evans, the American wife of the presiding justice, was formerly Miss Blanche Rule of Cincinnati. She promptly availed herself of her privilege with the court to give a box party, so to speak, in the judge's private gallery to twenty of her dearest women friends. Among them was Mrs. Reginald McKenna, wife of the Judge of Judges. The judges' gallery, in fact all the places for spectators, bloomed with fair faces and pretty toilettes, while every bit of evidence was eagerly absorbed.

Major Arbuthnot's testimony is the sensation of the trial so far. It related to the famous lost codicil to Sir John's will, by which the original bequest of five million dollars to the Sackvilles was greatly reduced. A draft of this codicil was found, but the codicil itself never was located. A reward of £50,000 was offered after Sir John's death for the discovery of the codicil, which was said to have been duly executed.

Major Arbuthnot dined with the Scotts on June 30, 1911. He said:

"After I had gone in and was going down the corridor I was just going into the library when a man servant called out:

"'Don't go in there, sir.'

"I had opened the door and saw two ladies in the room. One was walking away toward the fireplace. I did not see her face and I could not say who it was. The other lady was sitting in a chair by the writing table in a window. She got up just as I opened the door and turned so I could see her profile. It was Lady Sackville."

Counsel inquired:

"Did you notice any papers?"

"Yes," the witness answered, "on the writing table. I stepped back and trod on the butler's toe. I then went on to a little room at the end of the passage. Just as was leaving there I heard some one on the other side of the door say 'Now'."

"When I went out I saw Lady Sackville and Miss Sackville-West going on tiptoe down the passage."

HUNDREDS IN PERIL BY MAD MOTOR RACE

A mad race between two huge touring cars going at sixty miles an hour through the streets of Newton Upper Falls caused a score of complaints to be made to the police today and a search is now being made for a certain wealthy young man who is believed to have been one of the sped maniacs.

For a few minutes the lives of hundreds of people coming from the factories, going home from work, and walking the streets for pleasure were in danger.

The two cars came down Boylston street at an estimated speed of sixty miles an hour. Mrs. Emily D. Crowley was crossing the street with her three-year-old daughter. She had barely time to leap backward dragging the little one with her when the two racing cars blurred past and were gone.

Crowds crossing the streets from the Newton Upper Falls factories were in grave danger. The racing cars barely missed twelve passengers just alighting from a Boston & Worcester car. Owing to the dust only the first part of the car numbers was learned, but the police from descriptions given believe they will be able to find one of the speed autoists soon.

Whitman to Use Films in Campaign

Managers Plan Talking Motion Pictures by Candidate.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Mayor Gaynor is not to have a monopoly of the "talking movie" privilege in New York City, if the campaign managers of District Attorney Whitman have their way.

Mr. Whitman's managers are urging him to give "an immediate appearance" at Edison's studio, and supply a speech and films which may be exhibited directly after Mr. Gaynor's show, which has been on exhibition several weeks.

If the District Attorney agrees to this program, however, his friends insist that he will put a "punch" into his speech to overcome the statistics as to conditions in the Police Department provided by the Mayor and Commissioner Waldo in their speeches.

Whitman's nomination as an independent is assured.

Rev. R. S. Burke of Saxonville Dead

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, July 1.—Rev. Richard S. Burke, for six years pastor St. George's Church at Saxonville, died there today. He had been ill since October. Father Burke, who was fifty-nine years old, was born in Dorchester and educated at Three Rivers Seminary in Canada. He held pastorates in Winchester, Lowell, Chelmsford and Dorchester before going to Saxonville. Two brothers, M. H. and J. J. Burke of Dorchester, survive.

Bootblacks Deny Wage Increase Story

In Many Cases Pay Is Lower Since Price of Shine Was Doubled.

Dominick Unpacelo, president of the Boston Bootblacks' Union, is out with a statement denying any responsibility on the boys' part for the increased cost of "shines." The actual wages paid for boys since winning their strike, he says, are no higher today than when the boss bootblacks charged only five cents, instead of ten, for cleaning shoes. The only difference is that the boys now keep their tips. His statement follows:

"Most of the bootblack employers have raised the price of a shine, and told their customers it was necessary because they have given more pay and shorter hours. We wish to state that it was because they had to give up the tips, which they never did before our strike. As for raising our pay, it has been lowered instead. In most cases we received more than the $8 a week we now get.

Men on Train Save Two Girls in Peril

Quincy Pair Leap with Them to Safety as Cars Drag Them.

Bravery by John Eley, former New England League ball player, and John Stanton of Quincy, at the West Quincy station, today saved two young girls from death or serious injury. Agnes and Rosie Baldassini, dress of No. 189 Common street, West Quincy, on their way to Boston arrived at the station just as the 6:45 train was pulling out and attempted to board it while the train was in motion. Agnes missed the hand-rail on the side of the rear car and Rosie hung on to the car of the train. Both girls were being dragged along the track when Eley and his companion on the rear platform, taking in the situation at a glance, got down on the steps and each taking a girl in arms leaped from the train, bearing the brunt of the fall themselves to save the girls.

Wellesley Worried Over Sunday Problem

Outdoor Games for Everybody or Lid Goes Down on Country Club.

Can anyone help the citizens of Wellesley out of their difficulty?

A short time ago the people of the town petitioned for permission to play tennis on the Hunnewell Playground on Sundays. The petition was refused on the grounds that it is against the law to engage in sports of like sort on the Lord's Day.

On looking around, however, the signers of the petition noticed that tennis, golf and racquets and similar diversions were being engaged in every Sunday at the Wellesley Club. Immediately protests rose and the question was raised, "If it is allowed at the Country Club, why can't we play on the town lot?"

The petitioners stoutly affirm that they will get the right to play themselves or the playing at the Country Club.

Wrong Company Named in Report

The Boston Ice Cream Company does not sell ice, so that the error was obvious. Walter Libbey, the driver named, was employed by the Boston Ice Company.

Declares He Was Not Near Scene of Hinsdale Tragedy.

KEENE, N. H., July 1.—John H. Wren, on the stand in his own behalf in his trial for the murder of J. Stewart Hamilton at Hinsdale February 5, today denied emphatically that he had any angry words or dispute with Hamilton the afternoon of the murder, or that he had been very near the spot where the crime took place. He traced his movements for the three days preceding the crime and following it up to his arrest.

He said he had $155.25 the day before the murder. He denied ever seeing the registered letter receipt alleged to have been found in his chimney and having Hamilton's name, until his extradition hearing at Halifax, N. S.

Civic Alliance Pays American Tribute

Say Editorial on Prize-Fighting Aided Its Work.

At the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Civic Alliance, at No. 50 Bromfield street, Secretary Eben W. Burnstead, in his annual report, said:

"This alliance is under great obligation to the BOSTON AMERICAN for its editorial of June 2 against prize fighting. This editorial was extensively circulated by members of the alliance.

"We feel very much indebted to this newspaper for the attitude that this paper took in reference to that matter and the cartoon going with it. Both did much good and greatly helped our work."

Former Senator Charles N. Prouty presided.

The Civic Alliance aims to bring about legislation that will tend to protect the community and prevent the spread of crime and immorality.

Say Turtle Means That We'll Sizzle

Warm Sea Denizen, Caught in Vineyard Sound, Landed Here.

We're in for a scorching Summer, according to all the weather prophets along the water front.

They base their prediction on the arrival at this port of a huge Carribean sea turtle, which was captured Sunday in Vineyard Sound by the Provincetown sloop Sakutah, which docked at T wharf today. The old salts say that these turtles never come into northern waters except in unusually warm seasons.

The turtle was captured alive. It weighs 300 pounds and is five feet in length. It was sent today to the Chilcuzo Museum of Natural History.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

TROT BROUGHT GIRLS TO BLOWS THEN TO COURT

All our set out Winter Hill way that didn't have to work today crowded Judge Wentworth's session of Somerville District Court to see what was to happen to Mrs Sarah Lee of Nashua street in the turkey trotting case.

Mrs. Lee was found guilty of assault on Miss Elizabeth Murphy of No. 20 Trull street, but the case was continued to next Monday for sentence.

It seems that at last Thursday night's dance some of them were turkey trotting, in the opinion of Miss Murphy, who was chairman of arrangements.

John F. McCarthy was an aide and he told the Judge that Miss Murphy told him to tell Mrs. Lee and some others to quit turkey trotting and he did so.

Then Miss Murphy, backed up by Mrs. Winifred McHugh and Miss Mildred Huckins, told his honor that Mrs. Lee stopped her on the way home and wanted to know why the chairman had interfered.

Miss Murphy admitted, under vigorous cross-examination by Mrs. Lee, who conducted her own defence, that she said to Mrs. eLe:

"You were turkey trotting and, if you were a decent married woman you wouldn't dance that way."

Then Mrs. Lee knocked Miss Murphy to her knees, according to testimony. When asked to explain this to the court, Mrs. Lee said:

"Miss Murphy questioned my reputation as a married woman and I didn't feel obliged to stand for it. Anyhow, she pushed me first and she got what I gave her. I had kid gloves on when I struck her."

Outside of the above incident nothing out of the way occurred to mar the perfect harmony of the dance.

FOES, NOW FRIENDS, IN BIG REUNION ON GETTYSBURG FIELD

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 1.—Fifty thousand veterans, the most inspiring army probably ever assembled in the world now encamped on the historic field of Gettysburg, today began the celebration of the semi-centennial of the battle.

The death early today of Otto L. Stamm of Almond, N. Y., a member of the Twenty-seventh Massachusetts Infantry, was the fourth casualty among the veterans encamped here thus far. Stamm's lifeless body was found in his tent by one of his comrades.

Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison arrived at the camp headquarters this morning and was given a salute of nineteen guns.

The general air of being on a picnic, which has sat so well upon the veterans of North and South, who were the earlier arrivals in the anniversary encampment, has given way to a very considerable extent to a more strenuous attitude with the coming of the actual anniversary of the battle as the late arriving comrades come swarming into the camp by thousands from every point of the compass.

Just as fifty years ago, command after command of the Armies of the Potomac and of Northern Virginia came swinging up on the field laughing and joking in the teeth of death, so today the survivors of those gallant legions are converging upon the broad plateau with song and smile. Eager as ever were the boys of half a century ago, but intent upon far different purposes.

Continuous Stream of "Specials."

All night the old men continued to stream into the railroad stations and out to camp. At 3 o'clock this morning special trains were waiting on the sidings for miles for a chance to get into the town. One train after another, a continuous stream of them rolled into the town, stopped long enough for its load to be discharged and then made way for the next. The veterans left their trains dazed and bewildered.

The loss of sleep, the late hour, the strangeness of the surroundings, the excitement and the utter and absolute confusion had a terrifying effect upon most of them and men and women visitors to the celebration standing upon the streets of the town for hours to watch the tottering, shuffling procession of old, old men, frankly wept with feelings of pity, love and admiration. The railroads could not bring the trains in today within the expected time. The rush thus thrown upon the boy scouts, the regulars and the other organizations assigned to receive and look after the veterans between the railroad stations and the camp proved too much and hundreds of the incoming delegations after midnight had to depend upon anyone to direct them to their camp.

The nearest point of the veterans' camp to the railroad stations is about one mile away and the farthest point is more than two miles. So the veterans, most of them with hand luggage, found themselves confronted with the problem of covering the distance to camp as best they could and then finding the quarters assigned to them.

Each of the delegations had men of their own in charge, who tried to keep them together and to get them on the move toward camp, but the old men had promised folks at home to "send a telegram or write a letter as soon as we get off the train," and they wanted to keep the promise.

Out at the camp there were better facilities for receiving and caring for the veterans once they reached there, but the tremendous influx had practically drained the resources of the quartermaster. Hundreds of the veterans arriving in the camp found supplies of blankets exhausted.

Many Sleep in the Open.

Details of men from the army commands in camp and of the boy scouts received the veterans and did everything in their power to make them comfortable and reassure them that everything would be all right. In fact one of the brightest spots in the whole situation was the universal kindness, courtesy and consideration shown the veterans by every person with whom they came in contact.

Lieutenant-Colonel Louis E. Butler, secretary of the Pennsylvania commission, and Major James E. Normoyle, the army quartermaster in charge of the provisions for the veterans, spent the entire night touring the camp in automobiles to see that everything possible was done for the men as they arrived. Despite the utmost endeavors, however, including the voluntary sharing of their tents by those already quartered in the camp, hundreds slept out in the open, using their suit cases for pillows.

General Daniel E. Sickles, the sole surviving corps commander on the Union side, is among the comrades on the tented field who refused hotel accommodations, declaring his preference to roughing it with the boys who rougued it half a century ago. He said:

"The country has changed little. Right out in front of the Rogers House here my boys did some of the sharpest fighting before the final battle of the third day, and from where I sit on the porch I can look out on the spot, off there near Brostel's barn, where I was hit.

"I thought that was the end of me. But, thank God, I lived. Thank God, as one of the boys in gray said to me today, that a sufficient number of us have lived to come together here on this anniversary and clasp hands as brothers. I bear no ill will and am sure they do not. One man's life in a war like that didn't amount to much, and that I emerged from it maimed was nothing in comparison with the fact that the nation emerged whole, and the people of the two sections reunited.

"I believe I am living right now the happiest days of my life. Probably an old man as I am ought not to be traveling around in such heat, but I could not have missed this anniversary. And while I have been delighted to have the old fellows who fought under me come and shake my hand today, that is nothing to the joy of having the men I fought against and helped to whip come here and insist on shaking my hand and receiving from them assurances of their good will.

the following named gentlemen have consented to act as judges and will award the prizes in "The Triple Tie" contest:

JOSEPH H. O'NEIL, president of the Federal Trust Company.

WILLIAM F. GARCELON, graduate treasurer Harvard Athletic Association.

JOHN I. TAYLOR, vice-president Boston American League Baseball Club.

Readers of "The Triple Tie" who are competing for the $500 in prizes offered by the AMERICAN for the best solution of the story have UNTIL NOON OF THURSDAY to send in their contributions. Many will take all the time at their disposal to write their answers, but already hundreds of communications have been received at the AMERICAN office and the indications are that there will be a flood of letters between now and the closing hour.

The contributions will be turned over to the committee, which will plunge into the work of selecting the best answers. It is impossible to state when the awards can be announced. This, of course, depends largely upon the number of replies received. The committee may be able to dispose of their work quickly and, on the other hand, it may be some days before the winners can be announced.

The final chapter of the story telling how everything came out, will be printed next Sunday.

The AMERICAN is pleased to have secured such a representative committee to act as judges.

Who Pilfered Judge Almy's Best Shoes?

Judge Almy of the Cambridge Police Court is hoping for a chance to pass judgment upon the thief who raided the shoe emporium of Edward W. Newcomb at No. 29 Exchange street some time Sunday. The judge is minus a pair of his best shoes, which he had sent to Newcomb to be repaired. Nine other fancy pairs belonging to prominent Boston financiers and lawyers are also missing.

The thief evidently entered the store with aid of a skeleton key. He took several miles of shoe laces along with the shoes from the repair bench, but did not touch any of the new stock.

Segee Resigns as Revere Assessor

Convicted Falsifier Now Holds No Public Office.

Samuel A. Segee, former chairman of the Revere Board of Assessors, today sent to Town Clerk Albert J. Brown his resignation, to take effect today.

Segee was found guilty a few days ago of falsifying public records and was sentenced to three years in the House of Correction. An appeal has been filed.

Segee last week resigned as chairman of the board, and Charles H. Bates, former secretary, and Segee's bondsman, was elected to the place. Segee's resignation today leaves the office of assessor vacant. The method of filling the place has not been determined.

It was reported in Revere today that Bates also may resign. Walter P. White, chairman of the Selectmen, last week moved to have all the assessors resign, so that the places might be filled without a special election. If all resign, the County Council, which is the Boston City Council, would fill the places. Otherwise there will probably be a special election.

Segee forwarded his formal resignation to Town Clerk Brown, who made a copy of it and then sent it on to the assessors. The Revere tax rate has not yet been made up, and Segee's resignation is expected to delay this action further.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 300,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

NEW SHORTAGE OF $1922 IN JAIL

A new shortage of books of the East Cambridge House of Correction is reported today of the American Company of Boston, while checking the books since Frederick Smith, bookkeeper.

A shortage of $35 was found in 1913 has previously been reported. The new shortage is said to be the result of the books from 1908 to 1913.

The auditing committee sent its report to the County Commissioners, who sent copies to District Attorney John J. Higgins. In the latter action will be begun to attempt to fix the responsibility for Smith's defalcations and to attempt to recover some of the stolen money.

The investigation has failed to reveal what Smith did with the money. Juggling of the accounts was possible, it is stated, because of the lack of modern methods of auditing in force long before Sheriff Fairbairn took office.

...Y TELLS ...ACTS ON ...AL WATER

...has warned you to ...ed Summer drinks. ...ran you to guard ...eals masquerading ...ues of "mineral ...certain cheaper ...e ale." There are ...mineral waters ...inger ale" on the ...or the label and ...It's your only ...the dishonest

By CASSIDY.

I ... of the most noted ... cities in Boston ... of a prosperous ... state stream ... rail for a spe... mineral water.

I watched with some amusement the broker smack his lips over the fancied mineral properties of the drink. About the only property that water had was that it slaked his thirst.

How many of these fake mineral waters are served in other first-class places throughout the city? And the worst of it is that the consumer, through ignorance or carelessness, buys this water for the use of invalids and children.

Now the only value that mineral water has is that it lacks a high percentage of vegetable substance. Our city water runs high on this proportion of vegetable substance.

Copious draughts of water, especially in this hot weather, aid in flushing out the system and replacing the water lost by evaporation through the pores. Mineral water being comparatively free from vegetable substances, take up more of the waste products of the system than city water.

But when mineral waters are labeled as "curealls" you'd better consult your family physician as to their value.

The special brand of mineral water I heard the broker calling for bears such absurd claims as this:

"A swift and sure specific for digestion, constipation, kidney and liver diseases, etc.

"Renovates and builds tissue."

"Restores the functions of the stomach."

This water is put up in two brands, natural and concentrated. The concentrated, it is claimed, is made by boiling down the natural. Analysis of this water by government chemists show it is nothing more nor less than a solution of Glauber's salt and Epsom salt in the proportion of three of the former to five of the latter.

The company advertises its natural water contains much sulphur, in the form of sulphuretted hydrogen and sulphuric acid. IT FAILS TO EXPLAIN HOW IT IS POSSIBLE TO HAVE SULPHURIC ACID IN AN ALKALINE WATER. It's only another one of the frauds perpetrated, despite the pure food and drugs act. Why isn't the company forced to label this water properly?

Why should the president of the company, a well-known politician nationally, bother about such trivial things as misbranding?

There are other mineral waters called lithia waters. Some of them are as honest as the sun. Some don't contain enough of lithium to bother even the exploded uric acid fallacy of the origin of blood diseases.

Ginger ale is a popular Summer drink. The puncent quality of "bite" which people get in most brands of ginger ale is produced by capsicum, or the essence of cayenne pepper, and not by ginger, as many suppose.

The Bureau of Chemistry has wrestled with "What is ginger ale?" for a number of years. I maintain that this is another fraud and cheat. If capsicum or pepper essence is used instead of ginger, then it should be so stated on the label.

It may not be so harmful as many other adulterations. Nevertheless, it is a cheat and a fraud. The cheaper grades are filled with our old friends, saccharin, coal tar dyes and benzoic acid.

THREAT BY ICE MEN IF SEALER ENFORCES LAW

Sealer of Weights and Measures W. E. Dunn of Malden, in a statement today, declared that he had been threatened by ice dealers on account of his activities in behalf of the bill requiring ice men to weigh all the ice sold. He refused to name any dealer who had threatened him, but said that most of the threats had been made over the telephone. He says:

"I had been told the ice men would make me the most unpopular man in Malden if the bill drafted by the State Sealers' Association became a law. I was told that the blame for smaller pieces of ice would be placed on me. I blame Senator Claude L. Allen of Melrose for the defeat of the bill. ILL attention was that, if housewives wanted their ice weighed, they had authority to enforce this demand under the present law."

City Sealer Woolley announced today the result of a trip through the North End by two of his inspectors yesterday. He said:

They found that instead of receiving 15 pounds of ice for five cents, the people there were getting between 19 and 20 pounds. In no instance was any short weight found."

Attractions at Boston Theatres

Globe Theatre.

The Globe is offering an excellent program for the holiday week. The Three Lubins have a clever singing, dancing and change act, and Lockhart and Leddy are a pair of funny acrobats. Silver and DuVal, in a rural comedy and Blondell in a good variety act, are also on the bill. The local reel of pictures shows an outing at Nantasket of the Boston University Law School and the Pathe Weekly of world's news. Several excellent dramatic and comedy pictures are also exhibited.

Orpheum Theatre.

Roland West's comedy playlet, "Behind the Footlights," was featured for the new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. There were other acts and a new list of motion pictures.

St. James Theatre.

The Six Heras, exponents of mind reading, headed the program at the St. James Theatre yesterday. A half dozen other vaudeville features and new motion pictures completed the bill.

Bowdoin Sq. Theatre.

Violet Mascotte's Merry Maids continue at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. There are also several vaudeville features in the bill.

Plays That Remain.

"The House Next Door" began its second week at the Plymouth Theatre last evening. This play is showing Miss Eleanor Gordon's company at its best.

"Quo Vadis," in motion pictures, continues at the Tremont, where it is proving an attractive hot weather entertainment.

"The Battle of Gettysburg" pictures at the National began a new week yesterday. These pictures are among the most interesting ever exhibited in Boston.

Trips by Boat.

The steamer Dorothy Bradford offers an attractive excursion to Provincetown and return each day. Passengers are given time to visit the historic places in the old town.

No better harbor trip can be found than the sail to Nantasket Beach, which gives the best view of the many pretty islands in the upper bay.

The steamer Betty Alden is making daily trips to Plymouth. A stop is made at Plymouth to give passengers a chance to wander through the town.

Bass Point.

The steamers of the Bass Point and Nahant line are handling the heaviest traffic ever known to the company. The trend of excursionists to Bass Point is increasing each day, and is probably caused by the many new attractions that are offered at that resort. Famed for its shore dinners, Bass Point is preparing for a record breaking crowd on the Fourth of July.

OLD TIME VAUDEVILLE AT KEITH'S

There was a decided turn toward old fashioned vaudeville at B. F. Keith's Theatre yesterday. The new bill was crowded with "song and dance" acts that seemed to fit nicely into the ripe, red temperature of the day. Naturally, the Meistersingers continued as the centre of attraction, but even those excellent singers were crowded rather hard by several other musical features.

Perhaps the most conspicuous of the new faces on the bill was supplied by Ismed, a Turkish piano player. He worked in a setting that looked like a Turkish smoking parlor, and he displayed a serious interest in his work by refraining from ragtime. Ismed knew his piano—and he knew it well.

Another striking act was pressed upon you by Maude Muller and a thin gentleman named Ed Stanley. There was a familiar ring to Miss Muller's name that was not borne out by singing and dancing. Her chatter was both new and brisk, and if you do not believe a woman can be genuinely funny, drop in some afternoon. As the spirit of the program was musical, Miss Muller drifted into high notes, but they had a tang attached to them.

Edwin Stevens and Tina Marshall turned Shakespeare in rag-time and modern melodrama with amusing results and the Harvey De Vora Trio was very fast on its feet. A tiny comedienne called Georgette looked as if she might have just dropped out of "The Follies," for, like Mr. Ziegfeld's favorite maidens, she wore her legs plain. Other rag-time contributors to the bill were Mabelle Lewis and Paul McCarthy, who took things good naturedly, and Alberta Moore and Myrtle Young, who raised the dust with their toes. It was a good show.

Paragon Park.

The new features in the Palm Garden cabaret at Paragon Park added much to the joys of last evening's patrons. Both the Palm Garden and the other features at Paragon are more popular than ever this season. With increased facilities for receiving and caring for large crowds, which included many innovations in his programs, Manager Dodge is keeping things at a high pitch. It is expected that all attendance records will be smashed on Friday, the Fourth of July.

Camp on Trail of Boston's Mayor

Says He Hopes to Make Fitzgerald Change His Mind.

Walter Camp, Jr., is in Boston. He is camping on the trail of Mayor Fitzgerald. Camp says he is neither too young, nor too inexperienced to become Boston's deputy commissioner of parks, in charge of recreations. He said:

Mayor Fitzgerold thinks I am too young and inexperienced, but I have got the reports of a number of men who know what I can do and I want the Mayor to see them.

"I may not see him right away, but I intend to later on. Meanwhile I expect that a number of men who know my record will see the Mayor and try to persuade him to change his mind in my behalf."

The last Newton tax rate was $17.00. It is estimated that it will now be over $20 per thousand.

How to Make Your Hair Beautiful

Ten Minutes' Home Treatment Works Wonders, Stops Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff and Makes the Hair Soft, Brilliant, Lustrous and Fluffy.

Better than all the so-called "hair tonics" in the world is a simple old home recipe consisting of plain Bay Rum, Lavoris skin ointment, and a little Menthol Crystals. These three mixed at home in a few minutes, work wonders with any scalp. Try it out one night and see. Get from your druggist 2 oz. Lavoris, 6 oz. Bay Rum and ½ oz. Menthol Crystals. Dissolve the Crystals in the Bay Rum and pour in an 8 oz. bottle. Then add the Lavoris, shake well and let it stand for an hour before using. Apply it by moistening a little of the mixture on a soft cloth. Draw this cloth slowly through the hair, taking first one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair delightfully soft, lustrous and fluffy. To stop the hair from falling and to make it grow again rub the lotion briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. Apply night and morning. A few days' use and you cannot find a single loose or straggling hair. Hair will be looked on your scalp as thick as a mat. Dandruff will disappear and itching ceases. In ten days you will find fine downy new hairs sprouting up all over your scalp and the new hair will grow with wonderful rapidity.

Any druggist can sell you the above. The prescription is very inexpensive and we know of nothing so effective and certain in its result.

GIANTS CLAIM ROW WITH PHILADELPHIA MEN A FRAME-UP

GIANT PLAYERS CHARGE PHILLY ROW FRAME-UP

By DAMON RUYNON.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 1.—Members of the New York National League baseball team today charged that the attack on John McGraw, manager of the Giants by Ad Brennan, the southpaw pitcher of the Phillies, was a "frame up" on the part of the Philadelphians.

McGraw was slowly picking his way through the crowd which had swarmed out of the bleachers into centre field after the game yesterday.

Mike Doolan, captain of the beaten Phillies, raised alongside of him and linked his arm into the arm of the Giant chief.

Talks of Decision.

As Doolan took hold of McGraw's arm he asked:

"What was that argument you were having with Umpire Klem, Mac?"

He referred to a discussion between McGraw and other members of the Giants, including Christy Mathewson and the umpire, over a play which came up in the eighth inning. McGraw says Doolan's tone was friendly enough, and he had no thought of trouble. He made some commonplace reply to the Philadelphia captain's question and then Brennan is said to have stepped up from behind and smashed him on the point of the chin.

McGraw was staggered and dropped to his haunches. As he tried to get up, he was kicked in the head. Then, when he recovered his feet and started for his assailant, Doolan grabbed him and held him.

McGraw will not say it was Brennan who struck him, but even the Philadelphia players do not deny it was the left hander.

"I haven't any idea why they attacked me," said McGraw. "What hurts me more than anything else about the whole affair is the fellow who hit me came up from behind, and I never had a chance."

The only comment he made was when some one brought in the report that Otto Knabe, second baseman of the Phillies, was the fellow who struck him.

"Not much," said McGraw, emphatically. "You can go and bet a thousand dollars that it wasn't Kuabe."

"The only thing I can recall saying to them yesterday was: 'Well, Brooklyn may win the pennant, but Philadelphia never will,' said McGraw.

Brennan's friends claim the Giant leader told the young southpaw he is "Yellow," but this is denied by McGraw.

Walsh and Keevin Will Fight Charges

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 1.—Jimmy Walsh, the Boston featherweight, and his manager, Eddie Keevin, who were arrested Saturday, when they started to leave town, on a charge of absconding with $117.50 from the United Commercial Travelers' Organization, which promoted the fight between Walsh and Ad Zoltz at Saltair, have engaged counsel and declare they will remain here and carry the case to trial.

White Sox Awarded Notre Dame Star

CINCINNATI, July 1.—Chairman Augustus Herrmann of the National Baseball Commission handed down a finding yesterday in which he awarded the services of player W. G. Lathrop, a student at Notre Dame University, to the Chicago American League club.

Lathrop signed to play with the Chicago Americans at the end of his college work. He then signed to play with New York Nationals, claiming that he needed this money to complete his college work. The chairman held that the first contract was binding, declared the New York contract null and void and ordered the player to report to the Chicago Americans at once.

American Golfers Lose in France

LA BOULIE, France, July 1.—The international golf match between teams of professionals representing France and the United States opened here yesterday with two four-ball games.

John J. McDermott, national champion, and Tom McNamara, were beaten by the Frenchmen, Louis Tellier and Arnaud Massy, by 3 up and 2 to play.

Michael J. Brady of Wollaston and Alec Smith of Wykagil, the latter the American champion, were beaten by the French pair, Jean Gassiat and Pierre La Fitte, by a similar score.

Frenchmen have thus won two points out of a possible six and the Americans must win all of the four single matches, which make up today's program, in order to carry off the series.

Robinson, Ill, Out of National Meet

WESTBORO, July 1.—Albert S. Robinson, captain of the Mercersburg Academy track team and a member of the Boston A. A. team, will be unable to compete in the A. A. U. championships at Chicago this week because of illness. Robinson was ill when he competed in the N. E. A. A. A. U. championships Saturday, but rather than disappoint the followers of athletics he competed.

Monday he was forced to take to his bed, and yesterday the attending physician diagnosed his illness as mumps. He was selected as a member of the B. A. A. team that will go to Chicago.

Free Baseball Tickets for You, Fans! Root for Red Sox! Root for Braves!

If you hold one of the numbered baseball checks which the AMERICAN has distributed broadcast, it would be well for you to closely scan the sport pages of the AMERICAN'S Sporting Extra Edition today, tomorrow and every day until further notice.

Every one of the small checks which have been, and are being distributed, is numbered. The AMERICAN prints, each day, in the Sporting Extra Edition 100 duplicate numbers. If you hold a check, all you have to do is to compare the number printed on it with the list of numbers printed in the Sporting Extra Edition each day and, when a duplicate of the number you hold appears in the AMERICAN, it entitles you to a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Pilgrims' games—take your choice, it costs you nothing.

"Standing room only" is the watchword at Fenway Park and at the Walpole street grounds these days, but holders of AMERICAN numbered checks do not have to stand up, as the tickets now being issued entitle the holders to a grandstand seat at any game and at any time during the season of 1913.

Remember, all you have to do is to watch the daily list in the Sporting Extra Edition of the AMERICAN and when a duplicate of the number you hold appears, bring or send same to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, 5 Winthrop square, and you will receive a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Braves' games on the home grounds.

If YOU haven't yet obtained any of these checks, ask your newsdealer or newsboy, who will be glad to supply you.

Checks may also be obtained at AMERICAN Promotion Dept.

Watch your numbers carefully. If your number does not appear today it may tomorrow. When it does, it means a free Red Sox or Pilgrim ticket for you.

Offer Crawford or Veach for Lajoie

DETROIT, Mich., July 1.—If Lajoie goes on the market as a result of his row with Manager Birmingham, Detroit will offer Sam Crawford or Veach, the latter a swell young outfielder, who can bat .325 against any pitching, but not fast on the bases, and a substantial cash bonus for the Cleveland star.

The Detroit owner thinks that with Lajoie batting after Cobb, with his ability to hit any kind of a pitcher somewhere, even if not always safe, Cobb would pull off things on the bases that would astonish even those most accustomed to his present feats. Cobb, knowing that Lajoie could protect him under almost any circumstances, would take greater chances than ever.

MITCHELL'S SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

OLD FOX GRIFFITH, following out the tactics he started against the Red Sox early in the season, pulled off another victory over the champs in the first game of the present series. Griff's system is a simple one. It consists of putting in any old pitcher against the Sox, and if his team ties up the game or takes the lead any time after the middle of the game, Walter Johnson is sent in to finish up.

The scheme certainly gets the Boston goat.

Joe Wood was going along nicely up to the seventh, when the Senators (the Washington players do not like to be called the Senators, but as they were rude to us, we are going to call them Senators just out of pure cussedness) sneaked over a couple of two-baggers and tied the score. The Red Sox had only been able to tally once up to that time and that tally was practically a gift.

Groom had been pitching great ball and was going in fine shape, but the moment the score was tied the great Walter walked out back of third base and began warming up. He went to the box in the last of the eighth and nine people out of ten considered it all over but the shouting. Their "done" proved to be true. Both Wood and Johnson went along in style for three innings, but Smoky Joe broke in the eleventh, and in last inning the Senators won the game 8 to 1.

JOE began by issuing a pass to Moeller. Then in an attempt to catch the runner off first, Joe made a wild heave, the ball rolling over to the fifty-cent seats. Before Engle got it back to the diamond, Moeller was on third. Foster filed out to Lewis before the wild pegs. Milan hit to Ball, who booted the ball, although Moeller held to third base. Gandil, Morgan and Shanks followed with safe hits and two runs came in.

THERE might have been more if a piece of good luck had not prevented it. On Shanks' hit to center, Gandil did not venture to score from second. He got to third and was content to stay there and would have stayed there except that Speaker's throw was relayed home and got by Cady. Then Gandil irled for the plate, but Cady got the ball and fired it to Wood and Gandil was out on a very close play.

THE two runs made by the Senators, however, were more than they needed. The Sox came up for the last of the eleventh and Carrigan was sent in to bat for Cady. He took three particularly healthy swings at the ball and then ran for the dressing room. Henriksen batted for Wood and laced a single to right. He got no further than first, however, for Hooper whiffed the air and so did Yerkes. The great Johnson had made good again and the Senators ran off the field like schoolboys after school lets out.

AS a matter of fact, the Senators handed the Sox their first run and were nipped out of another when Shanks was caught asleep off second early in the game. With one down Shanks singled and stole second. He was caught napping, and on the next ball pitched McBride hit safely. This would surely have scored Shanks. In the last half of the second Lewis singled, Gardner followed with a safe hit to center, Milan allowed the ball to go through his legs, Lewis scoring and Gardner going to third. That was all the Sox got during the game.

THE Washington newspaper men who are traveling with the team say that Milan let the ball go through him five days running awhile ago. Four of these misplays were turned into home runs by the opponents. It got so that whenever a grounder went in Milan's direction all the other Senators dropped to their knees and prayed. Milan is fine at stopping the ball with one hand, but is a regular boob when he puts down both mawleys.

PAUL MALOY (only one I in his name, he says) arrived and reported to President McAleer. He is the pitcher secured the other day from the Kalamazoo Club on the recommendation of Scout Patsy Donovan. The club originally got the tip on Maloy from Peter Kelly (who is said to be a distant relative of Gordon Kelly).

Maloy is a fine, upstanding young man of pleasing address. If he can pitch as well as he handled himself in McAleer's office he will win some games for the Red Sox.

GERMANY SCHAEFER was canned by Umpire McGreevey late in the game. Schaefer was doing too much talking. "I just can't help it, Mr. Umps," he said to the official as he passed on his way to take a shower bath.

WE rather enjoy that Schaefer-Altrock comedy stuff when we are winning, but it is an awful pest when we are on the losing side. Am I right?

WE promise Mr. Griffith that if he keeps up this Walter Johnson stunt we will drive the great Swede to the tall timbers sometime. It may not be this year, or next year, but mark our words, it will come eventually. Do not trifle with us too far, you old, gray-haired fox.

SPORT WRITER DEAD.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Gerhard Otto Tidden, familiarly known as "Roger" and "George" by his friends, and for nearly twenty years baseball editor of the World, died early yesterday at the Prospect Heights Hospital in Brooklyn. The end came after a lingering illness.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 1.—Encouraged by their defeat of the Dodgers yesterday, after a long string of losses, the Pilgrims hope to make it two straight over Bed Bill Dahlen's men this afternoon.

Brooklyn was somewhat of a surprised team today, for after their clean-up of the Phillies they expected an easy time with the Bostons, especially with Rucker in the box. But the great southpaw went the way of many others before the heavy batting attack of the Pilgrims.

Stallings' men got no less than sixteen safe clouts, including two doubles and a triple. The shift made in the batting order by Stallings seems to have worked wonders with the men.

The veteran southpaw Otto Hess will be depended upon to snatch a win from the Dodgers today. If the weather doesn't suit Hess, "Lefty" Tyler will do the boxwork. Either Patsy Ragon or Earl Yingling will work for the Dodgers.

Lobert to Marry.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1.—John B. Lobert, third baseman of the Philadelphia National League baseball club, today took out a license to marry Miss Rachael S. Campbell of this city.

BUCK O'BRIEN TO PITCH AGAINST THE SENATORS

"Buck" O'Brien may start in the box for the Red Sox against the Senators this afternoon in the second game of the series. The Brockton spitball twirler pitched three innings against the Highlanders Saturday after a long rest and showed improved form.

The veteran "Long Tom" Hughes may pitch for the Senators. Hughes has been a sort of a Jinx in the path of the Champions, despite the fact that he is well along in years as a pitcher, and if he is right this afternoon, Griffith believes that his team will chalk up a second win over the Sox.

The Senators are now in fourth position as the result of yesterday's win over the Sox, while the latter team is a peg lower, but the gap between the two teams is only points and not wide enough to let Griffith rest comfortably. The White Sox moved themselves a few paces away from the Red Sox yesterday by winning from Detroit.

A victory for the Red Sox today will put them back into fourth place.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Toe Giants after a plucky, dogged chase that lasted nearly two months, have overtaken the Phillies, and today are roosting on the highest perch in the National League coop, two points ahead of the Quakertown team.

* * *

The New Yorkers accomplished their dire purpose yesterday through the medium of as weird a ball game as ever was staged, and so amateurish from beginning to end that many of the fans in the Philadelphia grandstand left the game long before its ending in the tenth inning.

* * *

The Giants made five errors with their hands; the Phillies made seven. Each team made about twice that number with their heads. The Giants used three pitchers; so did the Phillies. Every time a runner got on a base he started to steal and usually reached his station, either beating the baseball, the throw of the catcher or through an error by the man taking the ball at the keystone station.

* * *

The Cardinals smote the offerings of the Red twirlers yesterday for two doubles, triple and ten singles, which gave them seven runs and the game.

* * *

Easterly's pinch hitting for the White Sox in the sixth cracked out a long single, scoring two runs, which tied the score at the Tigers and gave the Chicagoans their chance to win out by adding two more runs in the eighth.

* * *

Hal Chase, the first baseman recently secured by the White Sox from the Yankees, continues to chid the home folks. He annexed three safeties yesterday. Since donning his new uniform Chase, who was batting only a trifle over .200 for the Yankees, has been hitting for a .350 clip.

* * *

The Cubs drugged their heaviest artillery to the Chicago ball park yesterday and shot the Pirates so full of holes that they had the easiest sort of time taking the game from the Pittsburghs. The Pirates used three pitchers, who were bested for three doubles, a triple, a home run, a single and many runs.

* * *

The Naps scored the winning run in the ninth inning yesterday in their game against the Browns.

* * *

Among the veterans who were not at the Gettysburg reunion was Edward Plank, a pitcher drawing salary from the Athletics. Edwards would have liked to join his comrades, but he had a duty to perform and he did it with just as much skill as he used to show when a youngster a few decades ago. He offered his shoots and sinnts at the Yankees for nine innings yesterday, and the worst that was done to them was three hits and no runs.

Wiley Bent on Beating Collins

If ever an athlete was piqued over a defeat and jealous of his laurels, that athlete is George Wiley of Syracuse, the world's champion pace follower. Wiley is still wrathy over his defeat by Elmer Collins in their twenty-mile match race at Revere last Saturday night, and he welcomes the race tonight at the Revere track against Collins and Jimmy Moran.

Wiley will start in tonight's contest as well fortified against accidents as any rider can be, and he will have spare wheels aplenty at the track side in the event of his puncturing. He will also have the best pace obtainable, so that if he does not finish ahead in the race he can have no excuses to offer.

Lowell Boxer, in "Come-Back," Hopes to Defeat Pittsburgh Bearcat.

By JACK CONWAY.

FRANK KLAUS, the tireless Pittsburgh, middleweight, rules a favorite over Jimmy Gardner of Lowell in their twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. this evening. There will be many "fans," however, who will place a little wager on Gardner.

The meeting of this pair of star middleweights has aroused a great deal of interest among local lovers of boxing and Gardner have already fought three times in this city, and each whirl was a torrid affair.

The first meeting between these two rivals took place on April 12, 1910, and Klaus bowled in a winner. At the time it was believed that Gardner had not taken the Pittsburgh mauler seriously and so had not trained properly for the bout.

The men were later matched to clash on November 29, 1910. Gardner was in remarkably fine condition and gave Klaus a boxing lesson. The Lowell man a left hand, which worked with the precision and accuracy of a piston rod, kept Klaus' head bobbing throughout the greater part of the bout, while Jimmy's smashing right jarred his opponent.

The third bout between Gardner and Klaus was staged on January 31, 1911, and it was declared a draw.

WANTS TO "COME BACK."

GARDNER has been out of the ring for almost two years. A little over two months ago he decided to try and "come back." He started training faithfully, but was not sure whether he was right. In order to get a line on himself Jimmy signed to meet "Fighting" Kennedy at Manchester, N.H., on June 17. Kennedy had been defeating the best heavyweights in New York, but Gardner experienced little difficulty in stopping him in eight rounds.

Klaus, however, will not be easy, like Kennedy. There is no sense in denying that the Pittsburger is the best middleweight in the business. Of course he is not a Stanley Ketchell, but he is nevertheless a good performer.

KLAUS IS RUGGED FIGHTER.

WHILE Gardner has been taking things easy at his home in Lowell, Klaus has been batting with the leading men of his weight in the world. After defeating almost all of the star middleweights in this country he went to Europe, where he knocked out George Carpentier, the French boxing idol.

Klaus is not a classy boxer, but is a sweet fighter. He depends upon his aggressive tactics, great strength and punching ability in order to win his ring engagements. He is perfectly content to let his opponent jab him three or four times if he can land one mighty wallop in return.

SKILL AIDED GARDNER.

IN the past Gardner has been able to hold Klaus at bay by clever work with his left hand, and by using excellent ring generalship. It is a question whether Jimmy is as fast today as he was two years ago. The Lowell man has been doing a lot of road work, and plenty of boxing and work with weights, and from all outward appearances is the Gardner of the early months of 1911.

Jimmy is below 158 pounds and has no superfluous flesh on him. It waits to be seen whether he will be able to travel twelve rounds at the lively pace which Klaus is sure to set. Jimmy's judgment of distance may also be a little off.

KLAUS will probably try to fight Gardner off his feet, but Jimmy firmly believes that if he attempts to do this he will get the surprise of a lifetime. Gardner is eager to win, as he realizes that if he can beat Klaus he will be in line for the middleweight championship. The Gardner of a few years back would not have much trouble in wading through the present crop of 158-pounders, the majority of whom are in-and-outers.

Klaus wants to clinch his hold on the middleweight title. He believes that he will be able to stop Gardner tonight, but if Jimmy is right Klaus will have a hard time winning the referee's verdict.

THE preliminary card is better than the average. Mickey Brown of Malden will meet Joe Budreau of Medford in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. There is quite a lot of rivalry between these two lads, and they should put up a spirited contest.

Arthur Simon of New Orleans and Patsy Greene of Cambridge, who were rivals as amateurs, will clash in a six-round bout, while Dick O'Brien and Dave Powers will exchange punches in another six-round encounter.

ATLAS A. A. PROGRAM.

Frank Klaus vs. Jimmy Gardner, twelve rounds.
Mickey Brown vs. Joe Budreau, eight rounds.
Dick O'Brien vs. Dave Powers, six rounds.
Arthur Simon vs. Patsy Greene, six rounds.
Referees—Maffitt Flaherty and Jack Sheehan.

McDonald Beats Larabee.

DOVER N. H., July 7.—Kid McDonald of Cambridge bested Kid Larabee of Biddeford here last night. It is said that Larabee was not in the best of shape.

Big Syracuse Stakes.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 7.—Purses aggregating $40,100 for four days' racing have been offered for the Grand Circuit meeting to be held in Syracuse the week of September 8-13. Nineteen events have been scheduled, with $24,900 offered for trotters and $15,200 to be divided among the winning pacers.

Hennessey-Hubbs Draw.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Walter Hennessey of New Orleans outpointed Teddy Hubbs, the Pittsburgh featherweight, in a ten-round bout at the Olympic A. C. last night.

Frankie Hofnagle and Battling Larry Wells of Brooklyn battled ten rounds to even honors at the Military A. C., Brooklyn.

LITTLE LOST SISTER By Virginia Brooks

A Moving Story of the Author's Own Experiences in Chicago's Underworld

[illegible] A. Eastmer

CHAPTER I.

The Old, Underlying Evil

THE evil that underlies "white slavery" is as old as humanity. As far back as history gives any record, evidences of the existence of the evil and the consequent terrible traffic are to be found. From savagery to modern civilization women have been slaves to the brute that lives in the man. They have been captured and sold for profit and have had little to say.

The dark ages are replete with data on this sad, shameful phase of life. The dawn of the Christian Era, with its accompanying teaching of purity and chastity, introduced the extreme asceticism. A radical stand was necessary where civilization had apparently gone sex mad.

After Christianity was established and extreme persecution of the Christians had ceased, a general laxity developed and gradually the old conditions returned. During the Middle Ages social laxity increased with astounding rapidity. Laws framed for the suppression of evil were not enforced. One has but to read of the Court of Louis XIV, to gather an idea of the condition of society during this period. Such royal courts set the example and looseness ran through all grades of society.

With the beginning of the nineteenth century scientific methods were devised for handling the victims of this evil period. More or less interest was aroused in the bringing about of an improved condition of affairs. Some effort was made to punish defiance of the laws of decency. For the first time the evil was reduced to negotiable proportions.

If we read and follow the course of society's curse through past ages, we may be inclined to comfort ourselves with the reflection that wickedness is past and done away with, but this is far from being the truth. On the contrary, here in free America conditions exist that have never been surpassed in any age. As the problem faced ages that are past, so it faces us today.

"System" Takes In Villages

In my efforts at driving out criminality from one of the border towns of Chicago, I came face to face with some shocking truths. I found that evil as it exists in the small town is not a thing apart, depending on itself, but is actually a small part of a vast system. This system has its ramifications extending throughout the entire country. They extend into the most unlooked for, the most unbelievable quarters. Its supporters are men and women high in social and political life.

When I first made an effort to break down this wall of defence which protected evil doers, I found the doors of Justice gradually closing against me. I found myself beset by enemies in the most unlooked for situations. In fact I found that to ask that vice be stamped out was to stand practically alone unless by continued effort I could arouse sufficient strength of public sentiment to cow public officials into decisive action.

I have been amazed and horrified at the methods employed by these traders in human flesh to entice and induce the innocent and unwary into the nets spread for their unsuspecting feet.

I have watched over and over again our Little Lost Sisters making their first entree to the speedway of despair. One by one I have noted the causes, the enticements, the inducements—all of them far too carefully planned and laid to be observed by one so unworldly as the poor girl who gets caught. I have censured society in my heart, and justly so. The fate of the Little Lost Sister is to be laid directly at the door of society. Her defeat and destruction is the price society makes her pay.

When the forces of good are brought to bear upon these trappers and wreckers of young girls, I have watched the means they used to assure immunity and protection. They are safe as safety itself, unless some slip, some accident, happens that may occasionally bring one of them to tardy justice.

I have seen men held high in the public estimation come to the defence of these vultures. I have seen them use every technicality, every unfair advantage, to keep such scoundrels from the prison doors, until my righteous indignation cried out, "There is no justice in the courts. The laws are framed to shelter thieves. No man gets his just due."

FINDS VICE IS A TRUST

Whispered stories arouse my curiosity. Once more I watch. Again I am confronted with the System. I find that vice is a trust—the most powerful, the most elusive, the most evasive in the world. Not the victim profits, but the exploiters. Not the victims, but the landlords, society parasites, dwellers on the boulevards.

The pay envelopes are labeled for the procurer, the police, the politicians, straight on to the man higher up. Shame does not attend the man who profits from such a source. He is the smugly unconcerned business man of the twentieth century. Little Lost Sister pays the price. Out of the degradation of her body and the damnation of her soul the fat philanthropist delivers his dole to charity.

I have seen the beginning of temptation to young officers on the police force of Chicago. I have observed the hammering process that day after day affects conscience. I have watched the indifference grow upon them as their hands soiled upon tainted dollars. Gradually the growing income, the increasing comforts and perquisites, completely dominate such natures. Whatever trace of refinement may originally have been seen in their faces becomes lost in the blotting that comes of contact with the monster.

They, too, begin to close down on the Little Lost Sister. They hound her with threats of justice swift applied, demanding a portion of her revenue on the side.

Today I am convinced that the procurer, the officer, the keeper are tools only in the hands of the controllers of the trust. What they reap as benefit comes back to the trust as expenditures through gambling and drink bills contributed by the trust. The fortunes are for the wealthy sons of the trust magnates.

FLAW IN SAFETY METHODS

I am impressed with the striking difference between the agencies for the destruction and those for the safeguarding of the young. The agencies for safeguarding are scattered and ineffective, while those for destruction are united and nearly infallible. Hence the amazing power of the latter. The agents of the vice trust are always alert. Never in the moments of fatigue, of bitter disappointment and loneliness that overtake the Little Sister, never is the procurer far away. He is always at hand with a friendly word, offers of companionship, the promise of work.

In one moment of weakness, unsustained by any of the safeguarding necessities, down goes the Little Lost Sister. The doors close behind her. She is forever lost.

It is not only the ostensible friend in the hour of need that makes captures. Far more subtle influences are at work.

Miss Virginia Brooks.

to drag in the unsuspecting country girl. Here the methods pursued to bind and hold the innocent are no dastardly as to be almost beyond belief.

I have seen this process, too. I have watched the bound posing about as the blase dilettante of a small town, attracting little children. There begins a process of undermining purity and innocence. After this had been accomplished these rascals pushed the ruined children on and on until there remained but one way to earn their daily bread.

I will tell you the story of little Florence——a little scrap of a girl, just fourteen. Her father was employed on the many acres owned by the son of one of the foremost families in Chicago. This son, a gentleman in the city, a cur in the country town, never rested until he had Little Sister Florence in his power.

Fearing that his guilt would be discovered and tired of his plaything, he sent her out of the village with a pitifully small sum of money in her pocket.

So she struck out for the city alone—this child of fourteen years, untrained, unprepared, facing an industrial world alone. She sought work, but she could not earn enough to keep body and soul together. One of the women in the place that employed Florence offered to introduce her to a friend who would show her "how to make a living in a simple way."

HER EDUCATION IN CRUELTY

Thus Florence met the friend—"Watchful Johnny" of the System. The child's labor ceased; her education of bitterness and cruelty was just beginning.

After a time Florence tried to make the wealthy man pay her in money for the terrible price he had enacted from her. In his fear that some of his exclusive associates would publicly ridicule him for his indiscretion, he began to persecute the child through the aid of politics and the use of money.

Time passed and in a few years, driven from one dive to another, Florence died miserably and alone. The work of that son of wealth was complete.

He is only a type, after all—an exemplar of the unthinking, the criminally careless, the evilly intent. He and his hand keep on contributing to the ranks of the unfortunate, keep swelling the revenue of the masters of social corruption.

Society cannot afford to disregard the truth of the situation. Society dares not look with indifference upon this greatest of social problems which confronts us today. Little Lost Sister is to be reckoned with. Here is the handicap, here the struggle and here the cup of bitterness, as she drains it to its dregs.

I know this because I have seen it. I have lived side by side with her as waitress, clerk, or laundress—as roller of the factory. Why? Because I wanted to know for myself what it is that drums up recruits to the life that is death—because there might be an opportunity to bring to the people at large some suggestion, some insight yet dark, that would spur on a greater agitation and rouse greater interest in the abolition of this evil.

The Blessing of Age

A New Side to an Old Question

By DOROTHY DIX

A POOR, foolish women has written me a letter about a great reform that she wants to see inaugurated. She proposes to abolish age by decying that any such thing exists.

She says that the lives of many women are made wretched by the thought of growing old, and that thousands of women ruin their health and bring on insanity by worrying over their age. To prevent this catastrophe, she would have a law passed preventing the papers publishing anything about age, and forbidding people to ask each other how old they are, or to speak of age in any manner whatever. In fact, she would make age the one taboo subject in the world, and she thinks that the result would be that everybody would be young and happy, and altruistic.

I'm sorry that I can't undertake to push my correspondent's reform along, but I can think of nothing more horrible than a world in which everybody was young and foolish, or acting the manners and the appearance of youth. It would be like a picture without any softening shadows, like music without any minor chord in it, like a day that was all garish noon without any purple haze of twilight.

It takes age to ripen humanity, to give it flavor and sweetness, just as much as it does wine, and the society of the intelligent man or woman of fifty or sixty, who has seen and known life, is as much superior to that of the boy and girl of eighteen or twenty as the vintage of 1862 is to that of 1912.

YOUTH'S DESIRE

Naturally, all of us desire to keep young in the sense of keeping our bodies vigorous and our minds alert, but barring that, what have we to fear from the years, why should we so dread the coming of age? Especially why should women worry about growing old until they reach the point of distraction, as my correspondent avers that they do?

If a woman has been a raving, tearing beauty, we can understand her agony at age robbing her complexion of its fatal charm, her hair of its lustre, her eyes of their brightness.

But not the plain woman in a thousand or a living picture, and it is an actual fact that the great majority of women are better looking as middle-aged matrons than they were as girls. Often and often are in the sculptor that rebels rough features into symmetry, or gray hairs soften a hard face into comeliness, and many times just the mere expression of goodness on an old woman's countenance gives her a beauty that her youth never knew. It's the soul that we see as people grow old, while it's only the flesh we behold in their youth.

As for being interesting, certainly all the advantage lies with age. Nearly every young girl is a bore to talk to. She has no conversation worth listening to, because she has not had time to read anything, or see anything, or have any experience of life. You can amuse yourself for an hour playing with her as you would with a kitten with a ball, but after that, Heaven help you if you have to depend on her for entertainment!

On the other hand, practically every middle aged woman is interesting because, no matter how stupid she is, something strange and thrilling has happened to her. She has had some experience unique to herself. She has touched the great problem of human existence at some new angle. She has taken her part in the tragedy, or comedy of life and has at least one story of absorbing interest to tell.

Age also means to the average woman the playtime of life, and in this country it generally brings with it comforts and luxuries. The only years of most American married women are strenuous ones. They are busy bringing up their children and working and economizing, trying to help their husbands get a start in the world, but by the time they are fifty years old their task is done, and they are ready to spend the balance of their lives enjoying the fruits of their labor.

Look over the middle-aged women at any matinee or any woman's club gathering, and you see about as comfortable, well fed, well dressed, happy and satisfied looking a set of people as you will find anywhere on earth.

They are women enjoying the fat years after they have passed through the lean years. You will find more middle-aged women riding in automobiles than you will young ones. You will see more middle-aged women than young ones when you travel. And this is as it should be. The young women are at the worktime of life. The middle-aged ones have done their day's labor and are taking their ease. They are at the best time of life, and if they are worrying any about their lot they certainly don't show it.

There was a time when age had terrors for the woman who did not marry and when to be an old maid was to be the butt of the ridicule of fools. That time has passed. Instead of being an object of pity or scorn, the old maid is the subject of envy and admiration. She has her place in the world, her interests in life, her mission to humanity, and all that age brings her is the boon of greater freedom and of wider liberty than is possible to the young girl.

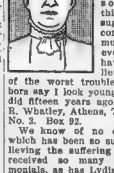
There was never a time in the world's history when age meant as little to women as it does now, and that they appreciate this is shown by the fact that they seldom hear the subject discussed, or see a woman who objects to telling how old she is. There are so many more things of interest now than the fountain of perpetual youth that we've ceased to hunt for it.

At any rate, we are all wise enough to know that nothing stops the clock, it goes on ticking off birthdays, whether we like about them or not, and the only thing to do is to make the best of it. Time is only an enemy to women when she makes it so. When she accepts it as a friend it brings her the choicest blessings of life.

COMPLICATION OF WOMAN'S ILLS

Yields to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Athens, Texas.—"I had a complication of diseases, some of them of long standing. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and some other things that you suggested. I must confess that I am much better in every way and have been relieved of some of the worst troubles. My neighbors say I look younger now than I did fifteen years ago."—Mrs. Sarah R. Whatley, Athens, Texas, R. F. D. No. 3. Box 92.



We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of them state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

We challenge anyone to name even one other medicine that has been so successful in relieving women's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a City Girl

He made violent love to Jennie

Chapter 13.

A FEW days after Jennie had got her new clothes she met Tom on her way to work.

Jennie was all excited when she saw him and wondered if he would speak to her after her refusing to marry him and her treating him so badly. She did hope he would, and that he would admire her new clothes.

Tom lifted his hat and acted as if there never had been anything the matter between them, and, boy-like, did not even notice her new gown, willow plume and things, that Jennie was paying $1.50 a week for on the installment plan.

That day her girl friend at the office said she had it all "cooked up" for a party that night with the boys they were out with before.

One of the boys owned an automobile and they would go out on a "bear" of a time. So that night after work Jennie and her pal met the boys. Jennie was all dressed up and her girl friend's beau didn't seem to have any time for any one except Jennie. This, of course, made the girl jealous, but she held in until after dinner, when they were all a bit "jagged," then she derided Jennie for trying to take her fellow away from her.

They had a fine row which made the fellow—who seemed to always pay for their "parties"—very angry. He told the girl he was tired of her anyway, and she had better get some one else to pay her expenses.

Then he proceeded to make violent love to Jennie—and poor little Jennie didn't know what to do. The other fellow—the one Jennie was with before—didn't have much to say, and whatever his friend did was all right, being as how his friend held the purse strings.

Coming back in the machine they sat on the back seat and the fellow talked and talked and tried to get Jennie to consent to let him furnish up a flat for her, and she could have anything she wanted. But Jennie was crying, and all she would say was: "NO-NO-NO!" Her girl friend wouldn't speak to her, but had vowed to get even—if it was the last thing in the world she ever did. Jennie begged the fellow to take her home—but he held her all the tighter in his arms, kissing her.

Their Married Life

Helen Forgets to Tip the Steward and He Does Not Hesitate to Remind Her

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"WELL, they're not going to let us land tonight," announced Warren, coming into the stateroom, where Helen had just finished packing.

"They're not! Why, dear, the steward just said we'd be in by eleven."

"No, it'll be nearer twelve. Just saw the purser—they're going to anchor till morning. Now I'm going on deck for a smoke, and you'd better turn in. They'll rouse us out about four."

Helen had looked forward to the excitement and adventure of a midnight landing. She was all packed, and now to unpack, and take out the things needed for the night was most discouraging.

It was after 10, but she knew it would be useless to try to sleep, so she threw a wrap about her and followed Warren on deck. Most of the passengers were leaning over the rails, watching the faint receiving rays of a distant lighthouse and trying to make out the dark outline of land ahead. After six days of the ocean everyone was eager to sight land.

Helen walked twice around the deck and then caught sight of Warren in the smoking room, laughing and talking with a group of men. She waited, but when he did not come out she went back to the stateroom and got ready for bed, with a dull sense of depression.

"Whew! It's hot in here!" grumbled Warren, switching on the light as he entered half an hour later.

NO AIR

"Dear, it's dreadful!" admitted Helen, who had been tossing uncomfortably in the upper berth. "There's not a bit of air up here."

"Not much anywhere. Guess we're going to strike it hot in Paris. We'll have a sweltering trip up from Cherbourg in these dinky trains."

"Why, we've stopped, haven't we?" suddenly realizing that her discomfort was partly due to the lack of motion.

"She's slowing up; we'll anchor in about ten minutes now."

After a week of the rocking ship and swishing waves, the sudden steadiness and silence were strangely disconcerting. They had come to a dead stop now, and the air was stifling. All the sounds of the ship, which the roar of the sea had deadened, were now painfully distinct. A few couples were still promenading the deck, and stewards were dragging trunks through the corridors, getting ready for the early morning landing.

During the trip the motion of the ship had rocked Helen to sleep, but now the sudden stillness was sickening. She had heard of people being "land sick" after an ocean voyage; now she realized what it meant.

"Why in thunder don't you lie still?" growled Warren, as he could hear Helen tossing above him.

"Dear, I can't sleep! I think I'll get up and go on deck."

"You'll stay right where you are! Think I'm going to be kept awake by your prowling around here? Now you lie still and go to sleep."

Helen tried to lie still, but she could not sleep. How much longer must she lie there?

Then came the sounds of sailors washing the decks. Surely, if Warren could sleep through all that noise, she would not waken him. It was half-past three.

She dressed swiftly and hurried up on deck. Several passengers, who had evidently not gone to bed at all, were strolling about. The air was close and sultry.

THE HARBOR

The harbor was dotted with anchored ships, shadowy and ghostlike in the gray dawn. It was all so still and motionless. The land was quite plain now, but it looked bleak and barren. It was Helen's first glimpse of France, and this gray line of rocky cliffs was very different from the fields and villas she had pictured.

Sea gulls were hovering about the ship and resting on the water. There was a heavy odor of fish and seaweed. Gradually the gray mist lifted and the Eastern sky lit up with the first glow of sunrise.

"There's the tender," some one called, as they sighted a small boat steaming its way toward them.

Helen hurried down to awaken Warren, but found that he was already up and half dressed.

"See here," scowling into the mirror at the collar he was trying to button, "we've got all these people to tip yet. I should've had the purser change some money. Well, they'll have to take American money—ought to be glad to get any. Let's see what I've got here," drawing a roll of bills from his pocket. "Five dollars for the table steward, $5 for the bedroom steward, $2 for my bath steward—and how much for your steward-ess? What did she do for you? Anything besides fixing your bath?"

"Yes, she hooked my dress every evening."

"Well, $2 ought to be enough for her. Now, about the deck steward, what did he do besides putting up the chairs?"

"You know how he served my lunch on deck the first day?"

"All right, $2 for him. Here, you attend to that," giving her the money for the stewardess and the deck steward. "I'll see to the others. Jove, there's the smoking room steward! I forgot him."

"Oh, dear, do you have to give him anything? It seems so much to have to tip so many."

VERY COMPULSORY

"Well, you've got to do it, or if you ever came on this ship again you'd find it blamed uncomfortable."

"You can get breakfast now, sir." The bedroom steward was at the door. "Your luggage ready to go down, sir?"

"Yes, all ready. You can take it now," and Warren slipped into his hand a $5 bill.

Although it was not yet five, the regular breakfast had been prepared for the passengers leaving for Cherbourg on the tender.

"Dear, if you don't mind, I'll not wait for you. Perhaps I'd better go up and find the stewardess and the deck steward."

"All right," as having finished the herring Warren now attacked the omelet. "You hustle on. Go back to the stateroom and take a look around. See that they've got everything out."

Helen had no difficulty in finding the stewardess, who was hanging over the banister, plainly waiting for her tip. The deck steward, too, was in evidence, but a passenger was instructing him about a steamer rug to be kept for the return voyage.

Then Warren came up, and they leaned over the railing to watch the sailors load the trunks on the tender, and Helen forgot all about the two dollar bill she had thrust in her glove for the deck steward.

When the baggage was all on, the passengers filed down the gang-plank. Early as it was the ship's band was stationed on deck, ready to play a farewell salute as they pushed off.

From the tender Helen looked up at the great white ship with its fluttering flags. Every one was waving a farewell, the band was playing—it was a stirring moment.

A HINT

"Beg pardon, sir, but didn't you want to see me?"

"Hey! What's that?" Warren turned to find the deck steward at his elbow. "What in the devil do you want?"

Helen stared blankly. Then as she saw the other passengers glance at them with a meaning smile—she remembered the money in her glove.

"What's that?" repeated Warren, loud enough for every one to hear. "I don't know what you're talking about."

"Oh, dear, I forgot to give him his tip. Here!" taking the bill from her glove and thrusting it at him.

"So that's what you're after?" roared Warren. "Well, you'll pay for this infernal impudence: I'll report you, all right. I'll see if you're allowed to follow passengers and hound them for tips!"

But the man was running back up the gangway, and now the ropes were thrown off, and with a throb of machinery the tender pushed away.

With the steward out of reach, Warren's rage was vented on Helen.

"Nice position you've put us in," he fumed, "making everybody think we're trying to get away without tipping the stewards. Not that I care a hang what they think," quickly, for Warren always posed as being indifferent to what people thought.

But Helen did care! She was crimson with mortification. The amused glances of the other passengers had sent the hot blood to her face. She felt that most of them thought she and Warren had probably tried to escape all their tips. She knew there were some people who did this, and in what contempt they were held.

It was only another instance in which she foolishly allowed her self-consciousness to make her most unhappy.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HE WAS NOT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a young man for about seven months, when recently we went to a social together, and I danced most of the evening with another man. My friend, upon bringing me home, expressed his objection, and made a date with me which he later broke. I wrote to him, saying he should not be angry at me for what I did, and he did not reply. As I love this man dearly, what would you advise me to do, and was he right in doing what he did?

PERSISTENCY.

YOU were not considerate in giving all your time to the other man, but your punishment exceeds your crime, and the young man is not showing himself in a good light by prolonged sulking. Don't write again.

THEY ARE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and deeply in love with a girl one year my junior, whom I have known three years. Now, as my parents think I am too young to have anything to do with girls, I would like to have your advice on the matter.

JACK.

YOUR constancy for three years is in your favor. Be constant a few years longer and this will prove your love more than any protestations. In the meantime remember your parents know best.

YOU ARE RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen, and have been keeping company with a boy one year my senior. He has asked me to keep steady company, but I think I am too young, and know my mother will not approve. M. H. S.

I AM glad to know of a girl so sensible. Let your mother's opinion always have weight, and no harm will come to you.

CERTAINLY NOT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a man about twenty-four. We have been keeping company at least two months. He is very jealous of me and I am of him, but I don't show it like he does. One night while at a party he got angry because I paid attention to some of the other boys, and he has not called me up or been to see me since. Now, should I call him up and apologize, as I know he is very stubborn and won't give in, and as I love him dearly?

C. A.

THERE should be no marriage between two of your dispositions, for happiness could never result. Let this quarrel end it. If you married him you would find him much more stubborn than you find him now, and your apologies would have less effect.

DON'T TRY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl, seventeen years old, and I am in love with three young men. How can I find out which I like the best and which one would make the best husband?

PERPLEXED.

TRUE love has a way of banishing doubts. When a girl loves three men at once, she is more in love with love than with any individual. I am sorry you are interested in any men at your tender age.

LET HER HAVE THAT PRIVILEGE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

After a young man sees a lady home, is it proper for him to bid good night first, or the lady?

M. G. H.

SHE should always have the privilege of terminating an interview.

STOCK MARKET AND FINANCIAL NEWS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stock markets were dull and irregular today, particularly so in Boston. In New York there was an improvement in prices around the end of the first hour, most leaders then showing small gains.

Locally, Boston Elevated was down a fraction. Its gross earnings last month showed a gain of 25 per cent compared with June, 1912, when receipts were diminished by a strike. The gross for June, 1913, over one, 1911, was 9 per cent.

Price changes in the local list were without much significance. Boston & Maine and New Haven were unchanged. United Fruit a shade bigger and American Zinc, Amalgamated and United States Smelting were each a trifle lower.

At about 11 o'clock in New York, Northern Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Amalgamated, American Smelting, Steel and American Can were up by fractions and Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio has sustained small declines.

There have been rains in the American and Canadian Northwest, which have helped winter crops.

New York Opens Irregular.

Prices were irregular when the New York market opened and it grew weaker in early trading. This was in keeping with the situation in London. Union Pacific was a prominent issue and wavered between contending influences. One story circulated to its price deterriment was that documents had been submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission which reflected upon the road's methods of book-keeping and cast doubt upon the surplus as reported on the balance sheet. There was on the other hand satisfaction over the prompt action of Federal judges in approving of the dissolution plans. The list was under pressure around the opening, but most declines were small.

Union Pacific began at 146⅜ with a gain of ⅜, but within half an hour had fallen to 145⅛ for the loss of ⅛. Southern Pacific was ¼ higher at the outset but lost its gain and suffered a net decline of ⅛.

There has also been a clique at work, it is reported, attempting to bear the Harriman issues.

How Other Stocks Fluctuated.

Other active issues closely followed the lead of Union Pacific. Reading declined over a point to 156⅛. A loss of two points was sustained by Lehigh Valley, which sold at 144. Amalgamated opened at 63⅝ for a fractional loss, recovered and then sustained another fractional decline. Canadian Pacific was off a half. Among the other issues were American Can ⅜, Baltimore & Ohio ⅜, Northern Pacific ⅝ and St. Paul ⅛. Fractional gains were made by Steel common, Erie, Missouri Pacific and Great Northern preferred. Steel after half an hour, sold at 53¼, a gain of ¼ over Monday's final.

The Curb was irregular.

Operators in London were above New York parity, but lacked firmness. The operators in American shares were apparently waiting for a New York lead on the Harrimans. Canadian Pacific was flat on the other side. The London market had a weaker tone in general because of further reports of fighting between Bulgarian and Servian troops, and consols resumed their decline. What should have been more of a sustaining influence was a dividend disbursement for July 1 amounting to £40,000,000.

Dissolution Approved by Court.

When Federal justices at St. Paul decided to enter a final decree approving of the plan for dissolving the merger of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, as agreed upon by attorneys for the roads and President Wilson and the Department of Justice, they ignored Attorney-General McReynolds' request that their decision might be delayed until he had a chance to file any objections he considered to be for the future interests of the government. The government approval to the plan was only tentative, it appeared to bears. The bears used the attitude of Mr. McReynolds as a weight upon stock prices and under the leadership of Harriman stocks the market sagged. After it had been closed for nearly an hour Judges Sanborn, Hook and Smith announced they were going to do as the Union Pacific attorneys asked and render an immediate decision. This was in approval of the segregation pact and will, become effective as soon as it is filed in the Federal Court in Salt Lake City. The merger has been dissolved.

The court overruled the Attorney-General's plea for publication of the plan, and practically approved of the plan in its entirety with the exception that it named Louis C. Krauthoff of New York city as a commissioner of the court to see to it that the letter and spirit of the plan be carried out. The court also directed him to report to it from time to time.

"We deem a decree of dissolution more necessary at the present time than at any other action," said Judge Sanborn after announcing the decree.

The government, however, in the plan approved by the court, expressly stipulated that should any illegal conditions arise from the exchange of stock, either under existing or future legislation or future interpretation by the courts of present statutes, the government would have the right "freely to assail" the arrangement.

Differ on Income Tax.

Differences as to income tax provisions will prevent the caucus of Democratic Senators from being ready to approve of the administration tariff bill by tomorrow night. They hoped to have the long, tedious task finished by that time.

"A snag was struck," says a Washington dispatch, "when the income tax was taken up. The Finance Committee's exemption of $1,000 for children in the case of married persons, thereby raising the minimum of non-taxable income is much more than $3,000 to $4,000, was the target, and every conceivable form of exemption was suggested and opposed. The opposition is still open.

Many amendments to the tariff schedules were rejected, including a 15 per cent. duty on Egyptian cotton and a countervailing duty on agricultural implements and lumber.

The free list was completed with the exception of art schedules. Senator Cummins will urge a stamp tax on all sales of all products and stock exchanges.

Chip whisky and cane-spirit goods amendment, agreed to by the caucus, is to be slipped out of the bill when it gets to conference.

London Copper Quotations.

There was a slump at the opening in the London copper warrants market, spot and futures each declining £4 6d here.

This was in the face of forthlight foreign statistics, showing that European stocks of copper, including Hamburg and Rotterdam, decreased 1,727 tons during the last half of June, while copper supplies afloat recorded a loss of 500 tons, making a total decrease in visible supply of 1,777. On June 30 the visible supply was 38,199 tons, compared with 39,967 tons on June 14 last.

Butte copper output for June amounted to 22,485,670 pounds, as compared with 24,607,582 in that month in 1913.

Tuolumne Copper Company directors decided to postpone declaring a quarterly dividend. The company has only $25,000 in the treasury. It is reported that a fine body of ore has just been opened on the 2,200-foot level.

Financial News in Brief.

For May the operating revenue of the Pennsylvania's lines, east and west, increased $12,098,690 in total and decreased $2,774,563 in net.

Cash amounting to $1,723,695 is on deposit to pay the interest on the bonds of the St. Louis & San Francisco and underlying roads which is due today.

Railroads have placed within a few days, orders for structural steel totalling 3,000 tons and contracts are pending which call for 15,000.

Southern New England Telephone stockholders may subscribe for 12,040 shares of stock at par, which will make the company's outstanding capital $10,000,000.

The New York Sub-Treasury gained $3,520,000 from banks yesterday and has gained $6,349,000 since Friday.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Bearing the shields, ensigns and pennants of the Hoosier capital, and its progressive automobile, social and business organizations, over seventy persons will today start on a daring and adventurous run from Indianapolis to San Francisco and Los Angeles, reaching the coast in twenty-five days of running time. The cars are to travel by day and rest at night. No allowance is made for storms, rain, muddy roads, bad driving or any freaks of the weather and it is confidently predicted that each machine will get through on schedule.

The cars that will start and their drivers are: American, D. S. Menasco; Charles Reyden; Henderson, R. P. Henderson, Ray Harroun; Stutz, H. C. Stutz; Marion, W. McK. White, E. G. Gager; Mercer, Louis F. Disbrow, Ray Mamaras; Haynes, R. C. Crawford, Elwood Haynes; Pathfinder, Bruce Daniels, Robert Spigler; E. & J. fire truck, J. M. Allen, McFarlan, Arthur Dixon, A. H. McFarlan; Apperson, Elmer Apperson, Edgar Apperson; Empire, Courtney Guthrie, A. Fred Smith; Russel Gaar; Maxwell, C. G. Fisher.

Besides the cars in these are the other cars that will carry those accompanying the regular entries of the tour. With four to a car this means a party of seventy or more persons.

While abroad Mr. Sacks had the opportunity of looking into and inspecting the latest departures in the electrical and self-starting devices of the continental makers, none of which, he believes, is superior to the Bosch product.

Why Some Influential Bankers Fight the New Currency Bill Secretly, but Bitterly

Some eminent bankers in private conversation object to the government control of the new currency system in the same angry and intolerant spirit that the railroad men denounced the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise their operations in 1887. And yet so greatly has the idea of the supervision of the railroads by a government board sitting at Washington grown in the popular mind, and SO GREATLY HAVE THE RAILROADS PROSPERED UNDER THIS LAW since 1887, that the only changes since asked by the people have been to strengthen the law and to enlarge the powers of the commission. And the chief desire of the railroads now is TO GET UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE NATIONAL BOARD to escape from the tyrannies and operations of various State boards.

The bankers of the United States will have to accept the idea of government control of the new currency system because the power to issue $500,000,000 of emergency notes to prevent panics and to maintain a more stable rate of interest throughout the country is too great a power to vest in the uncontrolled discretion of private citizens.

PRIVATE credit is left where it belongs under the new system, exclusively the concern of the PRIVATE banker. The use of PUBLIC credit is reserved to the nation. The government cannot interfere with any national bank in its ordinary operations any more under the new system than under the old. It cannot force any bank either to grant or to refuse credit to any individual; it cannot force any bank to discount a single note. It leaves every bank's relations with its own customers unchanged and unaffected.

The government takes added cognizance only of the twelve Reserve Banks, but these are to be managed by local directors, two-thirds of whom will always be chosen by their own stockholders—the banks—so that in all ordinary operations the banks will be as closely managed by the bankers, without interference by the government, as the railroads are now managed by railroad men without unwarranted interference by the government.

The greatest opposition to the proposed law will come CHIEFLY FROM THOSE BANKS AND BANKERS THAT HAVE BEEN MOST ACTIVE IN THE PAST IN CONTROLLING THE RESERVES OF THE BANKS, THE PROMOTION AND FLOTATION OF NEW TRUSTS OR CORPORATIONS, AND THE CREDIT OF LARGE BORROWERS.

How completely this control has been concentrated in a few private hands of late years we shall now show by three highest expert authorities—first, by President George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago. This bank, in its holding of the deposits of other banks, is the largest in the United States. In an address before the National Business Congress in Chicago, on December 12, 1911, Mr. Reynolds said:

"THE MONEY POWER OF THE COUNTRY NOW LIES IN THE HANDS OF A DOZEN MEN. I PLEAD GUILTY TO BEING IN THE LAST ANALYSIS ONE OF THESE MEN. * * * FOUR OR FIVE BANKERS IN NEW YORK, TWO OR THREE IN CHICAGO, TWO OR THREE IN ST. LOUIS, CAN CONTROL THE QUESTION OF WHETHER LARGE LOANS SHALL BE MADE TO RANKING CORRESPONDENTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY."

The late J. P. Morgan and his most intimate banker associate, George F. Baker of the First National, testifying before the Pujo Committee last Winter, admitted almost as great concentration of money-power as that described by Mr. Reynolds. But both vehemently denied the existence of a "Money Trust," because, they said in substance, these enormous reserves of other banks were concentrated in such vast heaps under the control of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Baker and their associates only because the owners of the money trusted these bankers, in their integrity and prudence, and FOUND BY EXPERIENCE THAT THE MONEY WAS USED PROFITABLY TO ITS OWNERS. The other banks could withdraw the funds at will. There was no agreement, and no compulsion, and therefore no "Money Trust." Everything was entirely voluntary, legal, regular.

Mr. Baker admitted that the "concentration of capital had gone pretty far—probably far enough," and that "in the hands of bad men it would be extremely dangerous." But he added in effect that only great and good men could retain the confidence of bankers in such degree as to be entrusted with such power by other bankers voluntarily.

Without such concentrations of both credit and capital the vast underwritings and the extraordinary over-capitalization of many trusts which the country has witnessed would be impossible.

Undoubtedly these eminent bankers who have been and still are in control of credit have handled all the money entrusted to them PRUDENTLY AND PROFITABLY FOR THE OWNERS OF THE MONEY. But how have their operations affected the public interest?

In the coffee valorization scheme, in the manipulation of the Coal roads, in the making of the Steel Corporation, the small deposits of millions of Americans, through the banks, were used by these Masters of Credit to create over-capitalized companies, to distribute watered stock to the public, and to raise prices of necessaries of life to consumers.

The people's money has thus been used against themselves by the very trustees to whom the public and private credit was temporarily entrusted.

The operation is very profitable—to the trustees. We shall take, also from official sources, the testimony of bankers before the Stanley Investigating Committee, only a single instance to show how profitable the underwriting by syndicates of new trusts sometimes is. The instance is the launching of the largest of all the trusts in which Mr. Morgan was the chief, and Mr. Baker and, we believe, Mr. Reynolds were among his principal associates.

The United States Steel Underwriting Syndicate was for two hundred millions and it floated more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF SECURITIES. Only one call for $25,000,000, or 12½ per cent., was made on the underwriting syndicate. For that it received 649,988 shares of preferred and a similar amount of common stock. This stock was sold to the public through the Stock Exchange at an average price of about 44 for the common and 94 for the preferred, netting the syndicate $90,500,000. Expenses of the syndicate totaled $3,000,000, thereby involving $28,000,000 actual cash. Deducting the latter amount from $90,500,000, there remains $62,500,000 representing the profits of the syndicate.

Of that amount J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers, received $18,500,000, and the underwriters the remaining $50,000,000. There were paid four cash dividends of $10,000,000 each, which were paid to the syndicate members, and a final dividend of $6,000,000, a total of $46,000,000. The remaining $4,000,000 was subscribed to a second syndicate organized for the purpose of converting preferred stock into bonds, and the underwriters also made a profit on this transaction.

Simultaneously with the sale of this stock to the public, the prices of iron and steel in all their manifold forms were advanced all along the line, so that the Steel Corporation would show large earnings and its stock be made salable to the public at enhanced prices.

It is not from any doubt of the splendid ability or the financial integrity of the men who did this thing, and countless other things of the same kind, that the people of the United States refuse to put all their banks and credit, and the issue of "emergency currency," under the uncontrolled discretion of private bankers, however powerful, experienced or sagacious they may be.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES DO NOT WANT GOVERNMENT BY BANKERS OR BY THE MONEY POWER. THEY WANT GOVERNMENT BY THE GOVERNMENT IN THE INTERESTS OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE.

"Gracious me! Well, I declare! Tut, tut!" These startling expressions, so familiar to all sailors, were uttered by that grizzled old sea fighter, Admiral Professor Juice, as he observed with astonishment the scene that was being enacted on the floor of the gun deck of the dreadnought "Piffle," of which he was commander. A young midshipman named Cadwalader J. Widdlebury, while feeding a pet dove, was taken unawares and severely butted by the ship's mascot, a goat called "Knock-Out Pete!" "Take that animal and put him down in the basement—I mean the hold—and keep him there till he can behave in a peaceful manner!" cried Admiral Juice. Order having been restored, the glee club struck up a rollicking song, entitled "Peace, Gentle Peace!" At that moment the lookout shouted, "Foreign battleships coming!" "Are the guns loaded with marshmallows? Very well. Then send the enemy a wireless inviting them to attend our sewing society in the cabin this evening!" replied the fearless commander. Suddenly, with a deafening roar, a tremendous—— (To be continued—probably.)

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER III.

MARY DANFORTH had been right when she felt that Gordon Craig would not mention to her father the encounter of the day before. He was one of the men who know how to keep their own counsel, and he appreciated that in a case like this it was the girl, not the man, who should first mention the matter.

He had presented to Mr. Danforth the letter of introduction from his firm—not only with the hope of securing an order, but it must be confessed, with an equally keen hope of again meeting his acquaintance of the subway train. How this was to be accomplished he did not know. He could hardly ask a man many years older than he to allow him to know him in a social way, and, unless he did meet Mr. Danforth socially, how should he have an opportunity of any closer intercourse with Mr. Danforth's daughter?

He decided to leave this on the knees of the gods and to give his whole thought to the business upon which his employers had sent him to New York. Therefore, putting Mary from his mind for the time, he talked business so well that the girl's father was impressed by his earnestness and his direct manner, and, after promising to give him an order, turned the conversation to the young man's home affairs. He soon learned that he was from Texas, that this was his first visit to New York, and that he had no friends in the great city.

"See here, Mr. Craig," suddenly suggested the hospitable New Yorker, "if you have no engagement for this evening, suppose you come up and dine with my wife and daughter. I know they would be glad to know you."

Mr. Danforth was surprised at the gleam of pleasure that illumined the good-looking face of the young man before him, but he liked him the better for his evident appreciation of the compliment implied in the invitation from a man old enough to be his father.

"Thank you, sir!" was the delighted rejoinder. "I will be mighty glad to come!"

Craig remembered with a sensation of relief that he had brought a dress suit to New York with him, having been advised to do this by the senior member of his firm. "You never know what you will run up against in New York," his employer had said, "and if some big business bug should ask you to dine, you would want to look your best."

While Mr. Danforth was not what the Westerner considered "a big business bug," the young man certainly did want to look his best—for reasons of his own. These thoughts ran through his brain while his prospective host was saying:

"Come back here a little after 6 o'clock and we will go uptown together. I shall be detained here later than usual this afternoon, as I have some important letters to get off. But you be back by 6:30."

"Indeed I will, sir," the happy Texan assured him.

Thus it came about that Gordon Craig and Mary Danforth met for the second time. The girl had bestowed more care than usual on her toilet this evening, donning her prettiest little dinner gown, a simple, pale blue affair that showed her fair neck and shoulders and intensified the blue of her eyes and the auburn tints in her hair. Her suppressed excitement brought a vivid color to her cheeks. Gordon Craig had thought her a pretty girl when he met her on the train, but he had had only time to take in the general effect of her appearance. She had been tired and wan then, and her hat had cast a shadow over the upper part of her face. He was, therefore, unprepared for the very attractive vision that met his gaze when, responding to her father's call of "Mary, child, where are you? I have a guest here I want you to meet," she came into the drawing room. Her eyes looked straight into those of the tall Texan, and a deeper flush came to her cheeks. As her father said, "Mary, this is Mr. Craig, of Texas," she held out her hand with a frank smile.

"Mr. Craig," she said, softly, "I am happy to meet you."

There was no suggestion in her voice and manner of any former encounter with the stranger, and he thrilled with admiration of her poise and self-possession. He had heard that New York women were mistresses of all situations, and he could believe this as he looked at the young girl.

"It is nice of you," she was saying, "to come and dine with us tonight, when there are so many interesting things in New York for visitors to see."

"On the contrary," he said, as he bent over her hand, "it is Mr. Danforth who is kind to give me the opportunity of meeting the members of his family in his delightful home." He turned with a bright smile to Mrs. Danforth, with whom he had been chatting before Mary's entrance.

"You don't know," he said, "what it means to a fellow far away from home and friends to receive such a cordial welcome as this from people he had not even met twenty-four hours ago."

Then, as his eyes met Mary's she saw in them a twinkle of amusement, and remembered that twenty-four hours ago he had already met one member of the family, and that member was herself. Somehow, this knowledge, possessed only by these two, made a kind of bond between them, and she felt that Craig and she were almost friends already. She had many friends among young men—in fact, was rather popular with the youths in her set—for she was pretty and vivacious. But she had the reputation of being rather cold and distant. Boys bored her at times, and, when they became sentimental, they almost disgusted her, a fact that other girls, more romantic and impressionable than she, could not understand. But she was aware now that she found this Westerner distinctly interesting. He was entirely unlike the young men who talked trivialities with her—thinking that was the sort of thing that a girl liked—and much more interesting than the older men who, she felt, regarded her as an uninteresting young thing.

"What pretty manners he has," she thought, as he bowed and offered his arm to her mother when dinner was announced. "And how awfully good-looking he is in his evening clothes. I did not suppose that Texans were ever like that."

Her mother, noting the same deferential manner and well-bred bearing, mused to herself, after manner of matrons all over the world:

"What a nice mother this boy must have to have trained him so well."

HIS DIPLOMA

By MINNA IRVING.

He can row as if from Venice,
He's a crackerjack at tennis,
He's a wizard on the bunkers
And a wonder with a cue.
In a manner free and easy
He can navigate the breezy
In his monophane expensive
That he calls the Parley-Voo.
He can take a hand at poker,
And at bridge he is no joker,
He's a marvel on the banjo
And the tinkling mandolin;
And he keeps a polo pony,
For he thinks the game is tony,
And the football team he captains
In the one that's sure to win.

He belongs to half a dozen
Clubs exclusive, and his cousin
Is an English duke whose photo
He is careful to display.
In the place of books of knowledge
In his cozy room at college
There's a cellarette where bottles
Of the "first" are stowed away.
Of himself he is the proudest
When his raiment is the loudest,
And he keeps a super-ugly
Brindle bulldog for a pet;
But the only paper, later,
He will take from Alma Mater
Will be that he always uses
When he rolls a cigarette.

LAND FOR JAPANESE IN FLORIDA?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—It is gratifying to me to read in your columns some facts concerning the Japanese question. The question is one to which I have given a great deal of study long before the people of California had awakened to the peril that this race of people was bringing to their country.

I have learned that a lawyer of Seattle has obtained an option on 8,000 acres of land in Florida and is selling this land to Japanese. I am informed that this deal is being hurried through as fast as possible before the people wake up.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—You say government ownership is the one defence against corrupt railroad corporations. What is true about railroads is equally true about corporations of every kind; and of contract work of every kind given out by the government in State and nation, city, county and borough.

Individualism is a failure. P. K.
